Philosophy Will Add 3 Courses

The Department of Philosophy will offer three new courses in the spring semester. They are Philosophy 15, Masterpieces of Jewish Philosophy, taught by Dr. Henry A. Finch; Philosophy 406, Medieval Philosophy, taught by Dr. John A. Mourtant; and Philosophy 410, Studies in Greek Philosophy, taught by Jerry Stannard.

Masterpieces of Jewish Philosophy will be a discussion of thinkers within Judaism from Philo to Buber through Maimonides and Halevi in connection with such perennial religious problems as the relationship of knowledge to faith and revelation, the relationship of man and his works to God, the meaning of history and providence, and the constituents of a blessed life, personal and social.

Medieval Philosophy will cover the principal thinkers and movements of thought in the Middle Ages from St. Augustine and Augustinian tradition to Arabic philosophy and the revival of Aristotelianism, the synthesis of Christianity and Aristotle in St. Thomas Aquinas and finally to William of Ockham and the development of "modernism".

Plato's Philosophy Analyzed Studies in Greek Philosophy will be devoted mainly to an intensive study of the philosophy of Plato through an analysis of the major Platonic dialogues. Emphasis will be placed on the later more technical philosophic writings which are not discussed in the elementary course. Some attention will be given to the Presocratics and to Plato's influence upon Hellenistic philosophy.

Emergency Parking Will End Monday

The temporary emergency overnight parking stickers issued by the borough for on-street parking will become ineffective Monday.

The stickers were issued during the first week of November for parking in specific downtown blocks by students who had made arrangements for off-street parking which was then unavailable because of construction delays.

Sticker Privilege Withdrawn

Borough Manager Robert Y. Edwards yesterday said the sticker privileges will be withdrawn because sufficient off-street facilities—including two recently-opened lots—are now available for parking the cars using the stickers.

None of the approximate 150 or 160 stickers will be re-issued, he said, except in case of some particular emergency which is not anticipated at this time.

Edwards said letters have been sent from his office notifying the persons who had been issued the stickers that the privilege would be withdrawn effective Monday.

The stickers were originally issued for a two-week period, but their use was extended indefinitely pending the completion of several parking lots then under construction.

Rains Delay Construction

At the time of the stickers' issuance, Burgess David R. Mackey said the move was made recognizing that many persons and groups who have made distinct efforts to meet the deadline of Nov. 1 (when the borough's 2 to 6 a.m. parking ban went into effect in the fraternity area) have been delayed by the abnormally heavy and successive rains.

Emergency Parking

At that time, Mackey said the borough's intent was to cooperate with every car owner on an individual basis in helping him to find a place where he can park.

Temporary emergency parking was also provided by the University.

The University's facilities, on the old vegetable gardens adjacent to Parking Area 72 behind the Agricultural Engineering Building, was in use until the Thanksgiving recess.
