

Behind Campus Parking

Long-Range Plan Seen Possible in Five Years

Third of a Series

The University—possibly aided by a complete automobile-pedestrian survey—may be able to take steps resulting in the alleviation of the campus parking problem within two years and the development of a sound long-range plan within five years.

Walter H. Wiegand, director of the physical plant, yesterday said feasible projects which may alleviate prevailing parking conditions are now under the study of the University's six-man traffic committee. Concerning the proposed survey, he said:

"Consideration is being given by the administration to conducting a comprehensive traffic, parking and pedestrian traffic survey in the light of making recommendations toward solving the problem."

Wiegand said he believes the campus parking problem is basically one of "keeping abreast of a growing need." He said students in the future will probably have to walk farther from their parking areas than they do now because of the growing demand for parking.

Peripheral Plan Possible

Wiegand called peripheral parking—the placing of little-used cars on the outskirts of the campus—a possibility, one to be considered by the traffic committee.

In the event that such a plan is adopted, he said, the University would give consideration to providing transportation to the central part of the campus for peripheral parkers.

But he said such a project would present "a real problem" because of the peak 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. rush periods with comparatively little business at other times.

Sees No Further Bans

Wiegand also said he has "no knowledge" of any proposals to extend the ban on freshmen's cars to other classes. Such a plan has been called an alternative to peripheral parking.

George Britton, a State Highways Department engineer who worked on the department's report of its 1954 campus parking survey, said he believed a peripheral parking plan is "probably feasible." He said: "I don't think your solution can ever be a ban on cars."

Cites Fallacies in Method

The 1954 survey was conducted in conjunction with a similar survey of the parking problem in the borough. The report said the campus problem was one of distribution, rather than a lack of spaces. Wiegand said there were three fallacies in the methods by which the campus survey was conducted:

1. Spaces on campus are not unrestricted as the survey appeared to indicate; the first person to arrive at a parking spot may not necessarily use that space.

2. The survey covered the hours of noon to 1 p.m. and 5 to 6 p.m., when there is no great demand for parking.

3. The survey included some spaces not used for University parking.

Borough Police Probe Paint-Throwing Incident

Borough police are investigating several complaints of paint throwing occurring over the weekend.

Police reported that paint was thrown on a car parked in a fraternity lot and that seven or eight traffic signs were smeared with paint.

Frosh Files Information On Persia

Peter Persia, owner of Persia's Men Shop on S. Allen St., will face charges of disorderly conduct at 9:30 a.m. tomorrow at a hearing before Justice of the Peace Guy G. Mills of State College.

The charges were filed by Robert Daneker, freshman in chemical engineering from Williamsport. Daneker said Persia slapped him across the face Thursday night.

Daneker gave the following account of the incident:

Three other students and he went to Persia's store Thursday night, and Daneker decided to wait outside.

The three students re-appeared shortly, followed by Persia, who apparently ordered them out of the store, Daneker said. For some reason Persia began arguing with him, he said.

Persia called him a "big goon" and told him if he said another word he would hit him, Daneker said. The conversation ended and the four students began to walk away, he said.

Daneker said he called back over his shoulder that Persia better watch himself or he'd get into trouble. Persia walked over to him, took off his glasses and slapped him, Daneker said.

Persia last night refused to comment.

Council OKs Resignation Of Burgess

Members of Borough Council last night heard and accepted the resignation of David R. Mackey, Burgess of State College and assistant professor in the Department of Speech.

Council decided to postpone the naming of a Burgess until all suggested names for the position were contacted and considered.

Possibilities Named

Suggested names for Burgess included Guy C. Mills, justice of the peace; J. F. Shigley, veterinarian; William Hoffman, former Burgess; Charles Schlow, local businessman; Leonard A. Doggett, retired faculty member; P. A. Frost, local realtor; Edward Steidle, retired dean of Mineral Industry; J. Harris Olewine, professor of organic chemistry; Ross Edmiston, local businessman; and John Doty, local realtor.

Charles F. LeeDecker, president of borough council, vigorously denied rumors of being a possible appointee to the position.

Police Force Undermanned

Mackey told members of council that in his three years as Burgess, the Department of Police was, without qualification, a sound and efficient group. However, he added, "in my opinion, the police force is seriously undermanned." Mackey suggested at least four more men plus another vehicle be added to bring the force up to minimum standards.
