Evaluation Of Profs Underway

Within the next few days approximately 12,000 students will receive faculty-evaluation forms from all the professors in the College of Liberal Arts.

At least 250 professors, including full-time and part-time instructors, received these forms from the Liberal Arts Student Council evaluation committee yesterday.

The purpose of evaluation is to help instructors improve their teaching habits if necessary, according to Jay Feldstein, chairman of the committee.

Committee Sends Letters

Several weeks ago the committee sent letters to all the department heads in the College of Liberal Arts. These questionnaires asked for the name of each instructor, the number of courses taught by each and the average number of students in each course.

The information received from these questionnaires was used as a basis for the faculty evaluation forms.

A complete evaluation would involve approximately 20,000 forms. Only a sampling of 12,000 students in liberal arts courses will be taken.

Professors to Distribute Forms

Each professor can give the faculty-evaluation forms to any of his classes in each course. He can also choose the day on which he wishes to distribute the forms to his students.

The faculty-rating sheets contain 21 points. The student will fill in the professor's name and evaluate him on each point by checking the answer he feels best fits the professor's personality, teaching habits, etc.

Students will not be asked to put their names on the forms.

Professors to Keep Forms

The completed forms will remain solely in the hands of the professor.

An instructor-questionnaire will be distributed early next semester to obtain the views and suggestions of the program from the participating professors.

A faculty evaluation was last tried by the Liberal Arts Council five years ago. The results are not available, but it was called successful. The form used in this evaluation compares with the one previously used.

Council Allots Refugee Fund

The Chemistry and Physics Student Council last night decided to allot $100 to a fund for Hungarian refugee students at the University.

Seven or eight refugees will enter the University next semester under a special program sponsored by the National Student Association, according to Joseph Eberly, council president.

Professor Amos J. Shaler, chairman of the Hungarian refugee committee, is administering the program.

In addition to the fund, the students will receive room and board at fraternities, according to Eberly. The University may provide tuition and fees scholarships to the students, he said.

The fund, he said, may be used for books and incidental spending money.

AIM Meeting Postponed

The meeting of the Association of Independent Men Board of Governors scheduled for 6:30 tonight in 203 Hetzel Union has been postponed until Feb. 6, according to Lash Howes, AIM president.

Sleeve Up, Needle Ready

HARRY DAVENPORT, senior in liberal arts from Philadelphia, receives a Salk polio vaccine shot from Mrs. Martha Millhouse, a nurse at the Dispensary. Students may now receive the shot for $1. Written parental permission is needed if the student is a minor.

Magazine Accuses Soc Prof Of Advocating Subversion

Dr. Jessie R. Bernard, professor of sociology, was quite surprised to learn that she has been an advocate of the "sociology of espionage and subversion."

She was informed of her interest in this field by Soviet Survey, an analysis of cultural trends in the USSR, published by the Congress for Cultural Freedom, London, England.

The November issue of the publication is an article on Soviet attitudes toward sociology quotes from an article on "bourgeois sociology," by G. L. Episkoposov. It was titled, "On Some Aspects of Contemporary Reactionary Bourgeois Sociology," and was published in July in Moscow.

According to the article, "the sociology of espionage and subversion is said to be advocated by Professor Jessie Bernard, who justifies the use of any means, including espionage and subversion, to achieve a goal.

"She praises Hitler as a practical expert in the theory of strategic games," the article explains.

Dr. Bernard says she is as puzzled about the source of the material as was her sociologist husband, the late Dr. L. L. Bernard, who in 1948 was the subject of

Used Book Agency To Re-open Jan. 29

The Used Book Agency will begin receiving books at 1 p.m. Jan. 29 in the Hetzel Union cardroom. Books will be taken until the end of that week.

The sale of books will start Feb. 4 and the procedure will be the same as in previous semesters with a 20 cent handling charge.

The book lists given to the UBA by the departments of the University will be posted.

The book exchange will close at noon Jan. 19 and re-open the morning of Jan. 30.

Graduation Invitations

Approximately 50 graduating seniors have not obtained their announcements and invitations. They will be available until Friday at the Hetzel Union desk.

In order to obtain them, seniors must present their receipts.

Walker Will Speak At '57 Farm Show

By CAROLE GIBSON

The University will play an important part in the 1957 Pennsylvania Farm Show, including a speech by President Eric A. Walker.

A large group of faculty members will participate in the week-long show, which begins Monday in Harrisburg.

Dr. Walker will be a guest at the show Tuesday afternoon, and will address the annual banquet meeting of the Pennsylvania Poultry Federation that night.

The College of Agriculture will have the largest number of representatives. Dr. Lyman E. Jackson, dean of the college, and Dr. Herbert R. Albrecht, director of extension, will serve as members of the farm commission while Harold R. McCulloch, assistant extension director, will be the commission secretary.

To Serve as Aides

Also assisting with the administrative phase of the exposition will be four other assistant extension directors, Thomas R. Patton, Ralph C. Blaney, H. K. Anders and H. J. Poorbaugh.

William R. Gordon, professor of rural sociology extension, has written the annual rural talent festival program entitled "We Have It—In Pennsylvania" which will be held 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the large arena. Gordon has written the talent program for 12 consecutive years.

Rifle Team to Drill

As part of this program the Pershing Rifles Drill Team will give a precision drill demonstration. The program will also include a concert by the Pennsylvania Future Farmers of America Band, directed by James W. Dunlop, associate professor of music education and director of the Penn State Blue Band.

Four members of the home economics extension faculty will help staff the education exhibits in the show pertaining to home-making.

Lydia Tarrant will serve as the home economics leader. She will be assisted by Mary K. Rissinger, Eliza Corbin and Carolyn E. Lyon.

To Work With Youths

Allen L. Baker, State 4-H Club leader and professor of agricultural extension, will have charge of the myriad activities for 4-H youths over the state.

Two of the main activities will be the selection of grand champion livestock on Thursday and their sale on Friday.

Dr. David R. McClay, acting assistant dean of the College of Agriculture, will conduct a College

'Who's Who' To Publish 413 Names

Four hundred thirteen students will have their names published in "Who's Who in the News at Penn State."

This number represents 30 more names than appeared in last year's edition in which 383 student names appeared.

More than 500 students received letters from the "Who's Who in the News" publication board in December. These students were selected by the selections committee which is made up of the All-University president, Women's Student Government Association president, the nine college council presidents, The Daily Collegian editor, Emil Haas and Alberta Hoffman, editor and associate editor of "Who's in the News."

Students Charged Fee

Each student whose name will appear in the book was charged $2.50. This fee will cover the cost of printing and distribution.

Two copies of the book will be given to each of these 413 students, and complimentary copies will be distributed to all fraternities, sororities, departments and administrative offices at the University. All colleges, universities and newspapers in Pennsylvania will also receive copies.

Distribution Date Set

The tentative distribution date has been set for Jan. 18.

"Who's Who in the News at Penn State" was started in 1946 by Arthur R. Warnock, dean of men emeritus, in an effort to give recognition to outstanding men and women at the University.

The publication is sponsored by Sigma Delta Chi, professional journalism fraternity, and Theta Sigma Phi, women's professional journalism fraternity.

Crazy Weather Confuses Lion

The Nittany Lion stepped from his den briefly this morning to check the rising temperature and then stepped back inside to spend the rest of the day in peace and quiet.

He wanted no part of the crazy mixed-up weather expected today.

Mixed snow and rain is predicted to fall intermittently with the temperature becoming slightly warmer, rising to about 36 by this afternoon.

After being soundly beaten and thrown back from his snow fortress last night in a short but effective snowball attack by several freshmen he was in no mood to face weather like this.

Last night's low was forecast at 27 degrees.

Ohio Congressman Walks Out On Ike's Middle East Huddle

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8 (AP)—One critical congressman bolted a secret hearing on the Eisenhower Middle East manifesto today.

But Secretary of State John Foster Dulles expressed confident hope Congress would swiftly enact the President's policy.

"I'm hopeful it will be approved by Congress this month," Dulles said after a closed-door hearing of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

The President is asking for standby authority to use U.S. troops in the Middle East if asked in case of open Communist aggression. He also proposes to pour more dollars into the Mideast economy. Some Democrats were talking slowdown despite Dulles' and Eisenhower's appeals for promptness.

One of them, Rep. Wayne Hays of Ohio, stalked out of the hearing, denouncing the secrecy surrounding Dulles' testimony.

"I don't think the State Department and Mr. Dulles should be able to tell the American people that everything is lovely in public, and then go behind closed doors and tell what grave dangers there are," Hays said.

Cites 'Press Leaks'

He complained that the administration has "leaked" to the press but that congressmen are censured if they discuss on the House floor what was taken up in closed committee sessions. He said he wants to stay free to debate the question on the floor.

Rep. Albert Thomas (D-Tex.), a high ranking member of the House Appropriations Committee, also objected to speedy action. He said Congress should go slow about "delegating its responsibility for declaring war."

Closed Session 'Necessary'

Dulles, who testified at an open hearing yesterday, said he believed today's closed session was necessary.

"If it had been open," he said, "we would not have been able to tell the committee some of the things we did because they would have involved the security of the United States."

Committee Chairman Thomas S. Gordon (D-Ill.) also defended the nature of the hearing.

Gordon said that during the morning Dulles "discussed a number of points in detail which could not be given in open session for security reasons."
