

Harpsichord, Mime Star in 'Counterpart'

Frans Reynders, mime, and Herman Chessid, harpsichordist, will appear in "Counterpart," a program of music and pantomime March 19 in Schwab Auditorium.

A mime is a kind of drama in which scenes from life are imitated and generally represented in a satirical manner. The person who acts out this drama is known as a mime.

Frans Reynders studied pantomime with Etienne Decroux, who also taught Marcel Marceau and Jean Louis Barrault. As a member of Decroux' troupe, Reynders toured Europe and Great Britain and later starred in musical comedy in his native Holland.

Former Art Teacher

Reynders, a former art teacher and scenic designer, has always had a love of music and the harpsichord. He long felt that the harpsichord and its literature would provide the ideal auditory world in which he could perform his mimes.

After coming to the United States with his American wife, he sought to put his idea into actuality.

Reynders was brought into contact with Herman Chessid, harpsichordist and former pupil of Ralph Kirkpatrick. Chessid realized, that by working with Reynders, harpsichord music could become accessible to a much larger audience.

In addition to Chessid's practical experience as a recording and performing artist, his background in composition enabled him to clarify musical forms to Reynders in a manner which could be used as a basis for conceiving mimes, both abstract and narrative. The nature of this duo emphasizes the equality of each medium.

Music is 'Mirrored'

Thus, while the mime is enhanced by a new dimension, the music, in turn, becomes "mirrored" in its human "counterpart."

A program might, for example, include the selection Prelude and Fugue in D Minor from Bach with the mime acting out the theme of "The Bird."

BX Candidates to Meet

Nittany Council Williamson-- Plans Inquiry

Nittany Council Monday night set in motion plans to investigate its allotting of $10 a semester to each dorm for social affairs.

Mel Weaver, council president, pointed out that the special allotment is not always put to its best use. The money should be used for mixers and other activities to aid relations between coeds and men of the Nittany dorms, Weaver said during a meeting Monday night.

Weaver appointed a committee to look into the situation with a possibility of setting up a more definite plan for issuing the money.

The council also planned to revise its constitution.

Eng Council OK's Open House Study

The Engineering Student Council last night set up a committee to study with department heads of the College of Engineering and Architecture the possibility of holding an open house this spring.

The council had sponsored open houses in past years, but none was held last year. The council suggested that the engineering honorary societies might use the open house for their spring projects.

Athletic Insurance--

McCoy said he couldn't answer that now.

McCoy thought that the bill might have been introduced because of a case in California where the higher courts awarded a football player about $400,000 because of injuries he received in a high school game. The bill would thus protect state-supported schools from being sued for such large amounts.

Dr. Williamson has been affiliated with industry in other states before coming to the University. However, he has been a registered Republican voter in Pennsylvania for three years.

"I want to make it clear that I'll go along with no more carpet-baggers," Yosko said. "It might be well to keep college professors where they belong—in the colleges."

Service Test Date Clarified by Office

The Selective Service Qualification Test, scheduled for 8:30 a.m. April 18 in 121 Sparks, will be given as originally planned, although the Spring recess begins at 11:50 a.m. on April 17.

Students living in the residence halls who desire to take the test will be accommodated in one of the residence halls at a nominal charge, the dean of men's office said. Requests for accommodations should be made at the Department of Housing office in Waring Hall.

Application blanks for the test are now available at the dean of men's office.

NROTC Quarterdeck Elects New Officers

Roger Levin, junior in metallurgy from Glen Richey, has been elected commander of the Naval Reserve Officers Training Corps Quarterdeck Society.

Other officers are Clair Heckathorn, vice-commander; Michael Chapman, ship's secretary; and Challen Bonar, corresponding secretary.

Application blanks for the test are now available at the dean of men's office.
