

Students to Observe World Prayer Day

The University will join students all over the world in observing a Universal Day of Prayer for Students with a special service of worship at 7 p.m. Sunday in Schwab Auditorium.

The service is sponsored by the University Christian Association in cooperation with the Penn State Bible Fellowship and the student fellowships of the local churches.

The World Student Christian Federation, which internationally unites student Christian groups on campuses, annually sets aside the third Sunday of February as a day on which students all over the world pray for each other.

On this day students throughout the world will gather for services on their respective campuses.

Schradling to Speak

The Rev. Paul Schradling, program director of the Westminster Foundation and one of the two American members of the Executive Committee of WSCF, will speak at the Penn State service.

Rev. Schradling will further explain the purpose and value of the Federation Day of Prayer.

Assisting him at the service will be Rev. Luther H. Harshbarger, University Chaplain, and Helen Skade, freshman in home economics from Maplewood, N.J.

The Rev. Hal Leiper, Protestant chaplain to the University and associate director of UCA, will be liturgist.

Choir Formed

An interfoundation choir has been formed especially for the service. W. Paul Campbell, associate professor of music education, will direct the group, which is composed of students from the foundations on campus. This is the only service at which the special choir will sing.

An interfoundation committee has been working on the program since November.

Although the service will be a Christian one, prayers will be offered for all students throughout the world regardless of their religious beliefs.

The service is open to townspeople as well as students.

An offering will be received at the service for WSCF.

Old Barn, first building on campus, was erected in 1856 on what is now the site of Carnegie Hall.

ferent activities at about the same time and decided to hold a "friendly game."

A West Dorm counselor told the AIM board that the students had shown no previous bad behavior and no commotion was caused when the game was being played.

Past Record Considered

The board said it took into consideration the past record in recommending judicial probation. The board suggested that the students write to their parents concerning the incident and its outcome. The students were warned that "you have one strike against you" and not to become involved in illegal acts again.

The final case heard by the AIM group concerned two Pollock students who were caught gambling by their counselor.

Many Caught Previously

The Pollock students said between 25 and 30 students had previously been caught gambling in the dorm but had not been turned in to the Dean of Men's office.

The counselor said he caught a group playing cards last semester and he suspected gambling although no money was evident. He said he "dropped a warning" at that time. He said a group was discovered gambling later in the semester and at that time told the students it would be their "first and last warning."

The students voiced the opinion

Rosen to Talk To Phil Club

Dr. Stanley H. Rosen, instructor in philosophy, will speak on "The Philosophical Dimension of Liberalism and Conservatism" at the meeting of the Philosophy club at 7:30 tonight in 212 Hetzel Union.

In his speech, Dr. Rosen will take the point that it is "impossible to solve political problems by employing any systematic theoretical political position."

He will support his argument with remarks on the "general sense of liberalism and conservatism."

Dr. Rosen will stress informality in his talk in order to promote discussion among the students and faculty attending.

that if the games would have been stopped when first discovered, no further incident would have occurred.

One student, who was present when the counselor issued a warning against gambling, is under recommendation for disciplinary probation. The other who did not participate until recently was recommended for office probation.
