

Coffee Hours Will Climax Sorority Rushing Tonight

Formal rushing for sororities will close tonight with coffee hours and the filing of preferential lists by both rushees and sororities.

Rushees will receive invitations for coffee hours today from 10:30 a.m. until 12:30 p.m. Invitations must be answered

WSGA Vetoes Cigarette Sales In Coed Dorms

The Women's Student Government Association House of Representatives dropped a proposed plan to install cigarette machines in the women's dormitories at its meeting yesterday.

The committee appointed to investigate the possibility met with Dean of Women Pearl O. Weston. It reported that the University Health Service is opposed to the plan for two reasons.

Smoking 'Injurious'
First, it is considered injurious for the coeds to smoke. Second, there is evidence of a connection between lung cancer and heavy smoking.

It was also pointed out that since many coeds are minors, installing these machines would cause conflict with state law.

Elections Scheduled
WSGA and May Day elections will be held on March 19 and 21. Balloting will be in Thompson, McElwain, Simmons, Atherton and McAllister.

Town members and coeds from Grange and Women's Building will vote in McAllister.

May Day committee reports were heard and the possibility of electing members of the Hemlock Chain in the senior women's dormitory units was discussed.

'S' Club Lengthens Dance Registration

Registration for the Varsity "S" Club-sponsored dancing lessons has been extended through next week.

Students may register at the Hetzel Union desk for the class day of their choice. Students will also be able to choose an advanced or beginning class.

Classes are scheduled to begin Feb. 25 at 4:15 and 6:30 p.m. on Mondays, 4:15 p.m. on Tuesdays, and 6:30 p.m. on Wednesdays.

The 10-lesson series will cost $2.25.

● Although three-fourths of the women students are living in University residence halls, only 29 per cent of the men have dormitory accommodations.

Noth Speaks on Writers

French Author Has Prestige

The continuous brilliance of modern French writing is due to the direct and important part the French author enjoys in the process of publishing and the social prestige he can expect to be higher there than in any other country. Dr. Ernst Erich Noth, editor and manager of Books Abroad said last night.

In a speech sponsored by the Department of Romance Languages, Dr. Noth said in reference to "Paris: The Writer's Workshop," that "all the roads of the literatures from the four corners of the world still lead or at least point to the capital of world letters."

"For it is still tacitly or openly considered to be the final and most vied for sanction for any foreign author, however successful he may be at home, to have his work published in French translation, preferably under the imprint of one of the best known publishing firms of Paris."

Dr. Noth attributed the conditions of this ideal writer's workshop to a somewhat unique set of social and intellectual values which are different from ours. To understand the French writer's atmosphere, he said, it is necessary to look beyond the frivolous and yet enchanting features of French life such as fashions and cooking, and observe, perhaps, the meeting place of these writers, the literary cafe.

It is here, Dr. Noth said, "that so many significant and indeed also so many irrelevant debates have been engaged, ideas exchanged, or been born of suddenly revealing discussion brought about by some chance encounter." Here works have been conceived and written, and their publishers found.

Positions Held
"In order to better understand one of the many factors which make literary life in Paris the tight yet elastic, coherent yet multicolored network it is," he said, a view of the position many French writers hold in the publishing houses, as readers, editors, advisor or translators, should be seen. This is an intimate author-publisher relationship which provides for personal relationship and cooperation between the two. "What ever the challenge from other literary centers, among which Rome must be considered the most serious competitor, the claim of Paris to being the capital of world letters has yet to be seriously impaired," Dr. Noth said.

Pitt Coal Company Establishes Award
To encourage competent students to enter the field of fuel technology, the Pittsburgh Consolidation Coal Company has established a scholarship at the University.

The award, which will begin with the fall semester, will provide $500 for an entering freshman. If the student maintains a satisfactory scholastic average, he may qualify for renewal of the award for each of his four years.

Lion Coed Wins State Ski Crown
Karin DeJuhasz, sophomore in music education from State College, combined dexterity and speed when she won the women's slalom and downhill races at the Pennsylvania State Ski Championships at Ligonier Saturday.

Karin took the first event on the program, the slalom, by whirling her way through 50 gates in 1:05. She won the downhill race in 43.5 seconds, only three tenths of a second before Mrs. Robert Walgren of Pittsburgh.

The 19-year-old brunette made one bad move midway down the course in the first event, but she managed to pull out ahead of runnerup Mary Ryan of West Virginia to win by a full second.

Froth to Award 'Golden Lemons'

Although St. Valentine's Day is six days past, Froth has dug into its little heart and is awarding "golden lemons" to an assorted group of notables in the February issue on sale today.

Among those on the "lemon" list are Sam Valentine, Lash Howes, Rafael Sabatini and Sue Conklin.

Froth will also present a complete "Old Mania," a backlog of the semester's pinnings, engagements and marriages—probably an apology for those couples who have either been forgotten or misnamed.

Angel Flight Workshop Postponed

The Blue Yonder Workshop, sponsored by Angel Flight, has postponed its first session until Feb. 27 due to the sorority activities being held this week.

The meeting dealing with military courtesy, ranks of the service and military defense fundamentals of the Air Force will be cancelled.

First Duty Station
The first discussion topic will be on what is expected at the first duty station. Lt. Peter F. Haynak, a former student at the University, will speak on life at Lackland Air Force Base at San Antonio, Texas, which is the initial duty station for newly-commissioned officers.

He will emphasize what to expect at the station in terms of housing, duties and length of time spent there.

Chaplain to Speak
For the fourth meeting, scheduled for March 20, Angel Flight has obtained the services of the base chaplain of Olmsted Air Force Base, Chaplain David Pegues. He will speak on religious opportunities and services in the Air Force and will show a film entitled "Front Line Chaplain." Coeds who have not enrolled in the workshop may still attend the meetings which will be held at 7 p.m. in 110 Electrical Engineering.
