

Tribunal Recommends Office Pro for Three

Tribunal has recommended office probation until June for three students caught removing a battery from a parked car just outside State College borough limits near Millbrook. The incident occurred between 2 a.m. and 3:30 a.m. on Saturday, Feb. 23.

The case will be reviewed by the Senate Subcommittee on Discipline which is scheduled to meet Friday, according to H. R. Perkins, assistant dean of men.

Ed Council Votes 'No' On NSA

The Education Student Council in a straw vote Tuesday night went on record against the University's continued membership in the National Student Association.

All-University Cabinet will hear a final report and recommendation tonight on NSA from Lawrence McCabe, NSA coordinator.

Several council members said that NSA has little to offer the students since the other member schools in this region are so small that their problems are not really comparable to the University's.

They also said communication between NSA and its members is so poor that the student body receives little or no return on the money invested for membership in the organization.

The council also set up qualifications for a $100 scholarship to be awarded in the spring semester to a student in the College of Education.

The recipient must have completed one semester at the University and must have displayed an interest in education or psychology through scholarship, activities and attitudes.

Need will be an important but not a paramount consideration. The scholarship must be the only one received by the student during the school year.

The award will be made through the University Committee on Scholarships.

Council also approved a $10 donation to the Hungarian Student Relief Fund which is being sponsored by Hat Society Council.

The University's low-temperature laboratory is second only to that of the U.S. Bureau of Standards.

The three students, Andrew Jazwinski, junior in business administration from Wilkes-Barre; Donald Stitzel, freshman in electrical engineering from New Cumberland; and Spiridon Theophano, senior in business administration from Philadelphia, were apprehended by State Police when a small identification license tag, which was from a key ring belonging to Stitzel, was found near the car by State Police.

Stitzel was confronted with the clue Sunday, Feb. 24 and acknowledged participation in the theft.

The following day the three were arraigned before a Justice of the Peace in Bellefonte. A charge of larceny was dropped and the men were released upon making restitution and payment of costs which amounted to $5 each.

The three students testified that they were having a small party in Theophano's apartment on W. College Ave. earlier that evening.

There was some discussion on the poor condition of Jazwinski's car and in the process of starting it they decided that it needed another battery.

At approximately 2 a.m. they went in search of a similar car with the intention of removing the battery and placing it in their vehicle.

They found the car outside the State College borough limits in Millbrook and proceeded to remove the battery.

The identification license fell off in the process of trying to pry the battery out with a small knife attached to a key ring belonging to Stitzel.

The other two stated that Stitzel was only a bystander and that he did not help them remove the battery.

All three stated that they were not intoxicated.

'Cover Girl' Competition Draws 18

Eighteen coeds have entered the University "Campus Cover Girl" contest being sponsored by the Roto Magazine section of the Pittsburgh Press. Tomorrow noon is the deadline for entries.

Those who wish to enter must submit a photograph of any size to the Hetzel Union desk. The contest will be based solely on the photograph.

Judging for the University's "cover girl" will be held Saturday. Michael Moyle, editor of The Daily Collegian; David Bavar, photography editor of The Daily Collegian; and Richard O. Byers, assistant professor of journalism, will judge the campus entries.

The campus winner will be submitted to Roto where the photograph will be judged with entries from colleges in the three-state area of Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia.

The final winner will have a color photograph of herself published on the cover of the May 12 Roto issue together with a biographical sketch. No special prizes will be presented to the "queen."

Based on the photograph alone, the contest will not stress "cheese-cake," an official of the Pittsburgh magazine said. The photograph should be a reasonable likeness and should be flattering but not to the point of "cheese-cake," the official said.

Dairy Prof Takes Sabbatical Leave

Paul S. Williams, professor of dairy production, this month is taking his first sabbatical leave in 36 years.

He and his wife will travel to the land-grant colleges and experimental stations of the United States. They plan to study new projects on pasture research, work with hay and silage and dairy production methods.

The Williams' plan to return to the University next September.

Interviews to Be Held For Military Society

Scabbard and Blade, tri-service military honorary society, will review qualified advanced Reserved Officers Training Corps students for membership from 7 to 9 tonight in 216 Hetzel Union.

Those who attend must have at least a 2.5 All-University average.

Debaters' Congress Will Begin Today

The 22nd Annual Pennsylvania Interstate Debaters' Congress, representing 19 colleges in Pennsylvania and nearby states, will begin today.

The two topics to be discussed are: "What should be the role of the United States in the Middle East?" and "What should be the policy of the United States with respect to foreign aid, including military aid, defense support and developmental assistance?"

Registration for the debaters will be held in 316 Sparks. A radio broadcast will be presented by the representatives over radio stations WDFM and WMAJ from 9 to 9:30 tonight.

Dr. Robert T. Oliver, professor of speech, and officers of the convention will speak at the opening session tomorrow morning at the State College Hotel. The remainder of the day will be spent in committee sessions working on the foreign aid and Middle East problems.

A banquet will be held tomorrow night at the State College Hotel with Joseph F. O'Brien, professor of public speaking, acting as toastmaster. The Gavel Girl will be selected at the banquet. Competition among the women debaters for the award will be based on a speech, "Woman: What Is Her Place?"

The conference will close with an assembly session at 9 a.m. Saturday in 10 Sparks. Awards for the four outstanding parliamentary speakers will be presented at the assembly.

Ralph Kelley, St. Vincent College, is president of the Congress; Florence Stephenson, Slippery Rock State Teachers College, recording secretary, and Robert W. Adams, junior in business administration from Johnstown, archives secretary.

A representative of the U.S. Naval Academy will be chairman of the committee concerned with foreign aid legislation. The chairman of the Middle East committee will come from Rutgers University.

Other colleges and universities participating include Albany, N.Y., State Teachers College; Allegheny College, University of Delaware, Geneva College, Juniata College, Mount Mercy College, Oswego, N.Y., State Teachers College, University of Pittsburgh, Princeton University, St. Joseph's College and Westminster College.

Committee OK's Fish Loss Bill

A Senate committee approved a bill Tuesday calling for $43,891 to go to the State Fish Commission to pay for losses in the death of 147,072 trout killed in Centre County from water pollution by the Navy Ordnance Research Laboratory.

Much of the damage has already been offset by a donation of 93,000 fish worth $30,500 by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. The rest is to come from the General Assembly upon final passage of the bill recently approved by the committee.

The trout were killed Nov. 30 by a solution of sodium cyanide released from the Navy's laboratory. The State Fish Commission set the value of the fish at $74,441.

State Religious Aid Criticized

By MAGGIE LIEBERMAN Rabbi Emanuel Rackman, assistant professor of political and social philosophy at Yeshiva University, said Tuesday night that the religious challenge today is whether religion can prevent the state from becoming a god in and of itself.

"If religion is to play its role in America, it should not be concerned with grants from the state which would make it captives of the state, but instead religion should play the historical role of a moral authority," he said.

Dr. Rackman spoke on "The Interrelation of Religion and Political Science" in the second of a series of lectures sponsored by the Chair of Religion of the College of the Liberal Arts and the Committee on Inter-Religious Affairs.

importance so that the state cannot become a moral authority beyond which there can be no recourse, Dr. Rackman said.

Citing the doctrine of judicial review as a cherished American tradition, Dr. Rackman said this is not a legal doctrine, but rather a religious one which comes from the Bible.

He pointed out that there is too much "peace of mind" for religion to gain this position as a moral authority in our society today. He said there were more religious feelings in the atheists of the past than in the religious men of today, for the atheists were ready to speak with a moral voice against existing evils.

"The state is subject to a higher authority even though the higher authority has so easily defined personnel," Dr. Rackman said. This moral authority is an authority of faith and tradition and is the background of the American Constitution and the Bill of Rights, he added.

Dr. Rackman said that the religious problem in the United States is not separation of state and church, nor a second interpretation of the First Amendment which seeks fair treatment of all religions.

It was shown that the historical development of the religious problem should result in religion being so independent of the state that it will be in a position to criticize it.

Dr. Rackman said that the National Council of Churches in New York City, which discussed the moral issue behind the current Israel issue, was fulfilling religion's role as the moral authority behind the state.

The University built the first college forestry building in the United States in 1906.
