Succession Proposal Praised by Silva

Dr. Ruth C. Silva, associate professor of political science and a recognized authority on presidential succession, yesterday praised the president's plan for a constitutional amendment to clarify the disability clause of the Constitution.

The proposal presented by President Dwight D. Eisenhower clarifies that the vice president would merely act as president and would do so only for the duration of the president's disability. The plan also reaffirms the president's constitutional right to declare his own inability.

If the president fails to declare his own inability and if the vice president and a majority of the Cabinet find that the president is disabled, the vice president would then act as president for the duration of the inability.

When the question of possible usurpation was raised, Dr. Silva said that the plan contains two safeguards:

• The inability would be declared by the disabled president's own friends and appointees in the Cabinet.

• The president can declare the termination of his disability without the concurrence of anyone else.

She added that there are many other guarantees against usurpation in our constitutional system and in our political process. "I don't think usurpation is a problem," she said.

Although it has been suggested that Eisenhower made the proposal for personal reasons relating to his own health, Dr. Silva said these suggestions were "foolishness and bunk."

"Since it would take at least three and a half years to ratify the amendment," she said, "I don't see how this amendment could possibly apply to either Mr. Eisenhower or Mr. Nixon."

spring semester drive last year and should be topped this semester.

The Bloodmobile will be in the card room of the Hetzel Union Building from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on April 9 and 10.

The drive is being sponsored by Alpha Zeta fraternity and the Association of Independent Men.

Dr. Tukey said that the campus unit of the Red Cross finds a sponsor for the bloodmobile each semester because the unit is not large enough to handle the program alone, and because campus organizations are always willing to take over the sponsorship. David Myerson of Alpha Zeta is the chairman of the drive this semester.

Dr. Tukey emphasized that students between the ages of 18 and 21 are considered minors and must therefore get a release from their parents in order to donate blood. There will be no exceptions to this rule, he said.

Cards will be distributed to all students on campus for the purpose of sending home for the release to give blood. The Red Cross has guaranteed return postage on these cards so that students may send them home to their parents and have them sent back at no expense.

No students under 18 years old will be permitted to give blood under any circumstances, he said.

The blood collected in this campaign will go to the Johnstown region. This region extends from Cumberland, Md., across Pennsylvania to Pittsburgh, and also to the north of State College.

Dr. Tukey said that students at the University are entitled to free blood if needed, and that this knowledge should add impetus to the drive. He said that the students are entitled to the free blood as long as they are attending the University, even if they are at home when the blood is needed.

Elections Group to Meet
