

Tribunal Recommends Warning for Misconduct

Tribunal recommended a warning Tuesday night for Charles Bernheisel, junior in electrical engineering from Schuylkill-Haven, who was apprehended by State College police for disorderly conduct on March 22.

The dean of men's office accepted Tribunal's recommendation and informed Bernheisel that he was also under office probation from the dean of men's office.

The incident occurred about 9:45 p.m. Friday, March 22 when Bernheisel and a friend, Lee Berger, were observed by State College police in the 100 block of E. Beaver Ave. behaving in a disorderly manner.

The officer saw that they had had too much to drink, stopped them, and told them to go home and keep off the streets.

The patrolmen moved on in their car and returned later to the block to find Bernheisel and Berger still at approximately the same location.

The police stated that their gait was noticeably affected and were mainly concerned with preventing them from getting into further trouble.

Police detained Bernheisel overnight and lost track of Berger who went to his residence on S. Allen St.

Both were found guilty of disorderly conduct and assessed a fine of $5 plus costs of $11.50. Berger is a graduate student and disciplinary action in regard to him will be decided upon by the dean of men's office.

In interviews with the dean of men's office, the students said they began drinking at a local establishment in the late afternoon and continued for three or four hours.

They then decided to get something to eat and were proceeding with this general idea in mind when apprehended by the police.

Their principal mistake was not heeding the directions of the police to go to their places of residence immediately, they said.

Both students are over 21.

Philosophy Club to Meet

Dr. Francis J. Sorauf, assistant professor of political science, will address the Philosophy Club at 7:30 tonight in 217 Hetzel Union.

Dr. Sorauf will speak on the topic, "Politics and Ethics—The Case of the 'Public Interest.'"

3 Scholarships Are Established

Scholarship funds for University students have been established by three new gifts amounting to $5584.

Matthew J. Wilson of La Jolla, California, a 1918 graduate of the University, has provided $2000 to aid students in the College of Mineral Industries.

Another $2000 contribution from the Davis-Jephson Education Foundation will provide an Agriculture Students Assistance Fund to aid worthy students in the College of Agriculture.

The Budd Company has provided $1584 for scholarships to be awarded to students who have shown ability and are in need of financial aid to stay in school. The amount given was determined by the number of University graduates employed by the company.
