Men Work On Sewer Near Inn

Workmen are still repairing a sewer that was damaged by a cave-in Sunday night near the Nittany Lion Inn.

The cave-in occurred when a limestone cavern, one of many on campus, wore away until it could support the soil no longer, the division of landscape construction and maintenance said.

The cave-in left a gaping hole 15 feet deep, and large enough to "fit two cars in," according to a spokesman for the division.

Repairs interrupted by the bad weather yesterday and Wednesday, but it is expected to be completed sometime next week.

To prevent further cave-ins, the landscape division will underlay the sewer with a reinforced concrete mat.

Cave-ins of this type are common on the campus, especially in the area of Beaver Field.

Special cave-ins occurred on the track in Beaver Field last year, and in one previous year a surprised runner was swallowed up by the evasive soil. He was uninjured in the accident.

Another cavern showed itself when work was begun on a campus building some years back. Workmen sinking a caisson encountered the underground hole and had to continue to more solid rock over 100 feet below the surface.

Borough OK's Building Plans

The borough yesterday gave its approval to plans for two major building projects, a $250,000 business-district building and a $100,000 apartment house.

Plans were approved for a one-story building to replace the Pastime Building at the corner of S. Allen St. and Calder alley.

The structure will be 187 feet long and 54 feet wide, and will be constructed of cinder block with porcelain block panels across the front.

No date has been set for demolishing the present building. The occupants were ordered to vacate by last Monday. The future occupant has not been revealed.

Also approved was a 22-unit apartment house for S. Allen St. near Atherton St. The building is owned by Falk Bros., the designer and builder is William Hajjar.
