

Trophy Presentations To 'Week' Winners Planned for Revue

The overall winner of Spring Week and the winners of the individual events will be announced tonight at the All-Service Revue to be held at 8 p.m. in Recreation Hall.

Twenty-seven trophies will be presented by Jan Murray, nationally-known television personality, who will be master of ceremonies.

Tickets for the show are on sale for $1 at the Corner Room, West Dorms, the Mall, the Hetzel Union desk and at the door to Rec Hall starting at 7 tonight. Group ticket applications must be turned into the HUB desk by 4 p.m. today with ticket money. Seats will be reserved only for groups which have applied for them.

Murray's Appearances

Murray is best known for his weekly television show, "Dollar a Second." He has played in the Copacabana in New York, the Sahara and Flamingo Hotels in Las Vegas, in the Latin Casino in Philadelphia and the Mocambo in Hollywood.

"Showboat Jamboree," the variety show produced by the Second Army Division, will present a program of calypso, jazz, rock and roll, Broadway musical, Dixieland and minstrel music.

Their selection of musical numbers includes "Twelfth Street Rag," "Kansas City," "Jamaica Farewell," "Ol' Man River," "Riverboat Rock and Roll" and "Kentucky Babe."

60-Minute Revue

The 60-minute revue with its program of vocal, instrumental and production numbers, is touring the Second Army Area from Fort Meade, Md.

The final production of the evening will be the Pensacola Glee Club from Pensacola, Fla. The singing cadets are a volunteer group of Naval Aviation trainees which has appeared on Ed Sullivan's "Toast of the Town," "The Tennessee Ernie Ford Program"; and the Perry Como Show.

The Cadet Glee Club was organized nearly ten years ago to sing for divine services each Sunday at the Pensacola Naval Air Station Chapel. They continue this weekly performance today in addition to their guest appearances.

Prof Will Attend Grad Conference

Dr. Miriam E. Lowenberg, professor of foods and nutrition, will participate in the sixth conference of directors of graduate programs in public health nutrition at Gatlinburg, Tenn. today and tomorrow.

Dr. Lowenberg will also speak tomorrow at a conference on child feeding at the University of Arkansas Medical Center in Little Rock, Ark.

Advisory Board Approves 5 Senior Gift Suggestions

The Senior Class Advisory Board last night approved five suggestions for its $10,000 class gift.

The suggestions are a collection of books for the Fred Lewis Pattee Library, money for some portion of the Stone Valley project, furnishings for the Helen Eakin Eisenhower Memorial Chapel, photostat machines for the Library and furnishings for the proposed School of the Arts building. These suggestions are subject to administrative approval.

The $10,000 set aside for the class gift is the total amount taken from student fees and accumulated from the tuition for eight semesters.

Taken From Boxes

The suggestions were taken from boxes placed around campus by the advisory board for a week and one-half shortly before the spring vacation. All students and faculty were permitted to make suggestions.

Some of the suggestions that were eliminated by the board were tennis courts for the women's residence hall, funds for setting up an AM radio station, a loudspeaker for Beaver Field and a new bell system for Old Main.

A book collection for the Library would mean that the $10,000 would be used to purchase a special collection or to augment a particular collection already at the Library. Joseph Hartnett, class president, said that Library officials would be contacted as to its needs.

'Valley' Being Planned

The Stone Valley project has been put into the planning stages this year to provide swimming and recreation facilities for administration and students. The money would be used to help construct a dam for a lake or build cabins or other facilities.

The Chapel would use the money to provide for one special furnishing rather than general construction. Board members felt that in this way the class gift would remain distinctive.

The photostat machines would cost approximately $300 or more. They would be self-service and students could use them to photostat pages of books or magazines. Individual cost to students using the machines would be approximately two-an-one-half cents a sheet.

Would Be in Library

The machines would be placed in the Library for convenience only and could be used by students for other projects.

According to administrative sources, plans for the proposed School of the Arts building, to be located between the Home Economics South Building and Atherton Hall, have been drawn up. The class gift would be used to provide for the building of an art gallery, an auditorium or a theater.

Seniors will vote on the suggestions when they pick up their copies of LaVie at the Card room in the Hetzel Union Building. This date has not yet been set.

Eight Profs Will Survey General Ed

Eight faculty members will visit other colleges and universities this week and next week to look into their general education programs.

Dr. Howard A. Cutler, coordinator for the general education program, said the purpose of their visits will be to "help the University formulate and offer the best courses and program possible."

To Visit Colleges

Among the schools they will visit are the University of Florida, Florida State, North Carolina State University, the University of Chicago, the University of Michigan, the University of Minnesota and Brown University.

Several television outlets and art institutes in New York will also be visited for a look at new teaching materials.

The general education program will be initiated next fall when three courses will be offered on a pilot basis.

Purpose of Courses

Dr. Cutler said the purpose of the courses is to give students in specialized fields such as engineering a broader background in arts, humanities and social sciences.

The plan for the program grew out of an evaluation report by the Middle States Accreditation team last year.

The report had urged the University to broaden course offerings in basic education in the arts and sciences and cautioned against allowing educational programs to become too specialized or technical in nature.

Hours 'Moved Up' For Frosh Coeds

Last night was "move-up night" for freshman women's hours.

Effective from tonight, freshman women will have sophomore hours.

This allows freshman women two 1 o'clocks on weekends instead of an interchangeable 11 o'clock and 1 o'clock.

Weekday hours for freshman women will now be 10 p.m. instead of 9:15 p.m. They will be required to sign in and out with their hostesses only on weekends.

House May Kill Racing Referendum

Editorial on Page Four
HARRISBURG, May 1 (AP)—

A Senate-passed plan to hold a statewide referendum on betting at horse race tracks in Pennsylvania hit what may be a dead end in the House today.

Chairman Harry A. Naugle (R-Somerset) of the House Law and Order Committee said there would be "no hurry" to act on the measure opposed by Gov. George M. Leader in a last-minute move yesterday.

"I'm not going to say flatly it's dead and I'm not going to say it's alive," he told a newsman. "I will say that the governor seriously jeopardized its chances of passing the House." Naugle said the House Republican caucus would probably act on the issue behind closed doors next week, adding:

"I don't see how these members are going to put themselves on the spot with their people back home knowing that the governor would simply veto the bill."

The Senate barely passed the measure last night despite an about-face by the governor against the plan in its entirety.

Other Developments

Other legislative developments: Pardon Board Probe—A legislative committee investigating the state Pardon Board wound up a three-month probe today that ran into 3,000 pages of testimony.

Its final action was to clear Frank Hean, board secretary, of a charge by a Philadelphia woman that she paid Hean $50 to intervene in a case before the board.

The committee was expected to make a report before the Legislature adjourned.

GOP Position

Legislative Program—Republican legislative leaders came out with a lawmaking program renewing the GOP position of holding the line on new taxes.

The program was made public on the eve of their meeting tomorrow with the governor who, coincidentally, released a legislative program listing what he termed "10 points for the people."

Machines To Invade 'Den' In Summer

Automatic vending machines—similar to the ones now situated in the Waring Hall snackbar—will be placed in the Lion's Den of the Hetzel Union Building for the summer months.

Ossian R. MacKenzie, vice president of the University for business administration, said the move was an "economy measure."

He stressed that they will be removed before students return to the campus in the fall.

To Reduce Costs

MacKenzie said the main operation move was "to reduce operation costs during the summer when the majority of the students aren't on campus."

The Department of Food Service, which proposed the installation of machines, according to MacKenzie, had no further information at this time. A spokesman for the office said further details as to the type of machines will be announced later.

1 Machine May Stay

MacKenzie said there is a possibility that a coffee machine would be kept there when the other machines are taken out. The machine, he stressed, would not replace the present coffee operations but would be used to help alleviate the long lines for coffee.

The operation of the vending machines, he said, would be similar to that now used in Waring Hall. The University leases the machines from a private company and sells to the company much of the food used in the machines.

MacKenzie said the main operation saving will come from decreased number of employees.

Ex-Prof Receives Post At George Washington

Ross P. Schlabach Jr., former assistant professor of journalism at the University, has been named professor and executive officer of the Department of Journalism at George Washington University, Washington, D.C.

Schlabach resigned his position in 1951 to become dean of the School of Journalism at the University of South Carolina.

$5570 Grossed From Carnival

Total gross receipts from Tuesday night's Spring Week carnival amounted to $5570, about $470 more than last year's gross total, Robert Krakoff, Spring Week chairman, said yesterday.

The net profit which the Spring Week committee will be able to turn over to the Penn. State Scholarship Fund cannot be determined until receipts from the All-Service Revue and all expenses for Spring Week are calculated.

The total receipts from carnival show ticket sales amounted to $3315; food concessions, $1217; and rides, $1036.

The Spring Week committee receives a percentage of the food concession and ride receipts.

The show receipts are clear profit after carnival expenses have been subtracted.

Final Exam Issue Goes To Senate

The final examination exemption issue will go before the University Senate at 4:10 p.m. today.

The Senate subcommittee on the Superior Student met Monday with Dr. Wallace E. White, professor of wood technology. White proposed at a Senate meeting April 4 to allow an instructor to exempt, if he wishes, any student with a "C" or better average from the final exam.

Profs Remain Quiet

Both Dr. White and Dr. Ruth Ayres, chairman of the subcommittee, declined to disclose subcommittee action before the Senate meeting.

Dr. Ayres said that discussion prior to the full report might mislead members of Senate.

Senate failed to take action on the recommendation April 5 and instead, with the approval of Dr. White, requested that it be considered by the subcommittee.

Dr. White's proposal would modify a present mandatory Senate ruling. The ruling now reads:

Old Rule Stated

"No student shall be exempt from a final examination except by approval of the head of the department and the dean of the college in which the course is offered."

Dr. White's proposed reading of the rule, originally presented to the Senate, follows:

"Any student with a "B" average or better in a course may be exempt from the final examination in that course upon recommendation of the instructor."

Warm Weather Exhausts Lion

Upon hearing that the unusually warm weather would become even warmer today, the Nittany Lion resignedly put on his sunglasses, picked up his copy of The Daily Collegian and retired to the comparative coolness of his den.

Unusually exhausted from his efforts in the He-Man contest last night (he collapsed after running about 25 yards of the 100-yard dash), the Lion could hardly make a statement for the press today. However, in answer to the reporter's inference as to his not being in very good shape as compared with the other contestants, he replied, "After all, I'm no ordinary He-Man!"

With that, he limped over to his hammock where he intends to spend the rest of the day, well out of reach of today's predicted 80 degrees temperature.
