

Alaskan Statehood Talks Voted Down by Cabinet

All-University Cabinet Thursday night voted 17-7 against accepting a recommendation from the executive committee that student groups discuss whether Cabinet should endorse statehood for Alaska.

The committee asked that Cabinet members take the question to the groups which they represent. A letter received from the associated students of the University of Alaska prompted the committee recommendation.

The letter requested the University's student body to endorse statehood through letters to Congressmen. It listed other schools in the United States which already have taken such action.

May Set Precedent

Some Cabinet members said they believed the recommendation's defeat may have set a precedent for avoiding future discussions on matters not generally considered part of student government.

James Stratton, president of Mineral Industries Student Council, opposed the adoption of the Cabinet agenda because of the inclusion of the committee recommendation.

He said discussion on the question would be out of the realm of student government. Stratton said many students had told him they felt such discussion would "reduce the role of Cabinet to comedy."

Steele Favors Adoption

In a vote on adopting the agenda, All-University President Robert Steele cast his vote in favor of the adoption to break a tie of 10 for and 10 against accepting the agenda. There were three abstentions.

In discussing of the recommendation, Loraine Jablonski, president of Leonides, said student groups are "not qualified to discuss the proposal."

Suggests Student Poll

Michael Walker, president of Business Administration Student Council, suggested that a student organization other than Cabinet, such as The Daily Collegian, conduct a poll on student opinion.

Thomas Hollander, senior class president, defended the recommendation. He called Cabinet a "sounding board for student opinion," and said students "lack intellectual interest in outside matters." He said student groups "should be stimulated by discussions such as this one."

The club, conducted by Frank Gullo, associate professor of music, has just completed a tour of New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania. It will wind up its 54th season May 18 with a benefit concert at Waynesboro.

Features Included

Besides the Glee Club's renditions of college songs, familiar semi-classical music and folk songs, there will be three other features on the program.

They are the Hi-Los, a comedy group of 18 men; the Varsity Quartet, specializing in barber-shop numbers; the baritone soloist Wayne Zarr, junior in arts and letters from Levittown, who sings semi-classical songs.

Established in 1887

The Glee Club dates from 1887 when its total membership numbered 11, including the director George C. Butz, a graduate and horticulturist for the Agricultural Experiment Station. The tours then were always within a 40-mile radius of State College.

In contrast to these early tours, the Glee Club of 1913 made a coast-to-coast tour, and in 1928 went to Europe, singing in London, Oxford, Paris, Brussels, Antwerp and The Hague. The spring tour tradition sprang up in 1920.
