

Cabinet Is Top Group Voicing Student Views

All-University Cabinet is the highest student government body on campus, but more important it is the voice of the students.

This 25-member group meets weekly in 203 Hetzel Union Building to discuss and legislate on matters pertinent to the student body and the University.

The meetings, of course, are open to the public. Cabinet members urged students to attend and to express their views on matters before the body.

Although many items that come before Cabinet must be approved by University officials, the body does serve as a voice of the students to these University officials.

Some Items Discussed
Some of the items coming before Cabinet last year were:

- Should students be given a half-holiday for the Penn-Penn State football game and a longer vacation? (The football half-holiday was turned down by University officials, but an extra half-day was added to the Christmas vacation.)

- Is the supreme court a necessary feature of a student government system? (Cabinet couldn't make up its mind on this and the supreme court was left unchanged after weeks and weeks of debate.)

- Should seniors with high scholastic averages be required to take final examinations? (Cabinet, especially the senior class president and his advisory board, did much research on this and came up with strong points for exemption of exams for seniors. However, it died last year in a Senate committee, which was composed of mainly faculty and administrative personnel.)

- What can be done toward acquiring a student AM station? (Cabinet knew it must come up with a way of obtaining the money before this can be taken to the Board of Trustees. They started work on a plan to raise the money late last semester.)

- Should the University be a member of the National Student Association, a confederation of student government bodies. (Cabinet dropped out of NSA, but delegates were sent to the national conference this summer at the University of Michigan.)

These are just some of the major topics to come before the body.

Serves as Chairman

Cabinet is headed by the All-University officers: Robert Steele, who chairs the body, president; John Rhodes, vice president; and Joseph Boehret, secretary-treasurer. These officers are chosen in student elections held in the spring semester.

Other Cabinet members are: the presidents of the four classes, Women's Recreation Association, Athletic Association, Women's Student Government Association, Panhellenic, Leonides, Interfraternity Council, Association of Independent Men and Board of Dramatics and Forensics.

Also, the editor of The Daily Collegian, and the presidents of the student councils in the nine colleges of the University.

How Students Represented

Each student is represented directly by these Cabinet members: the All-University officers, the president of his class, the president of his student council, and the president of either the fraternities or independent students.

Cabinet also includes ex-officio members representing the administration, and a parliamentarian. These members are not permitted to vote. They act only in an advisory capacity.

Much of Cabinet's work is done by committees. There are standing committees for student elections, Campus Chest, which conducts a campaign similar to united fund drives; Spring Week, which plans the week spring fever catches up with students; and Student Encampment, which plans the student-faculty retreat held annually just before Orientation Week.

In 1932, the first student to enroll in the University was living as a retired physician on a farm in Arkansas.

In the 1870's permission from the President and the dean of freshmen were not allowed to be out after 9 p.m. unless accompanied by an upperclassman.
