

Gray 'Bonnets,' Pins Symbolize Hatwomen

Grey felt hats with red, blue or yellow symbols on the front and a small gold pin are the trademarks of the sophomore, junior and senior hatwomen on campus.

The four women's hat societies give recognition to women for their leadership, scholarship and service, and strive to promote University spirit, maintain a code of honor in all student relations and preserve University traditions.

Mortar Board, one of the oldest national honorary societies, and Scrolls, established at the University four years ago, recognize senior women. Chimes is the junior society and Cwens the sophomore society.

Requirements Listed

Mortar Board taps sixth-semester women in the spring. An average of .3 above the All-University women's average is required for membership. The pin, shaped like a mortar board, carries the words Pi Sigma Alpha to signify service, scholarship and leadership—the objectives of the society.

Each year the group sponsors the Mardi Gras—an indoor carnival in Recreation Hall with profits going to the Charlotte E. Ray scholarship fund.

The most recent women's hat society chartered on campus is Scrolls. Sixth- and seventh-semester women not previously recognized by a hat society are chosen on the basis of scholarship and service.

Act as Ushers

Members of Scrolls act as ushers for the Community Forum.

The purpose of Chimes is to honor junior women who have shown loyalty to the University by giving their service and leadership to the advancement of its interests, welfare and unity. It requires an average of .3 above the All-University women's average and stresses participation in two major activities.

Chimes' pin is a small gold bell—the clapper being a cluster of three pearls. "To lead with knowledge, to follow with intelligence,

Session Cost $37 in 1890's

Around 1890 the charge for room rent, furniture, and light for the session was $37, and the cost of board ranged from $2 to $3 a week.

As to the room, the University (then College) provided an iron single bed, two chairs, a table, a bureau, and a washstand but no carpet, curtains, or bedding. There were usually two students in each room.

Student clubs furnished the meals first with facilities in Old Main and later in the village. These eating clubs, which seem to have been the forerunners of fraternities, not only provided food but rivalries and loyalties which added spice to college life.

to seek the worthwhile life" is the group's motto.

This society assists with the Women's Student Government Association and Women's Recreation Association elections. Each year the group decorates one of the floats for the Miss Penn State parade, a part of Spring Week activities.

Cwens, the sophomore women's group, is the oldest women's society on campus. Second- and third-semester women with a high scholastic average and a record of at least one major and two minor activities are eligible for membership.

All women's hat societies assist in counselling freshmen.

Office Obtains Students Jobs

For the student who hopes to earn part of his way through college or pick up some spending money on the side, the University maintains a Student Employment office in 112 Old Main.

This office is responsible for finding part-time jobs and summer positions in camps and resorts for students.

Students may obtain jobs as babysitters, clerks, secretaries, houseworkers, librarians, draftsmen or technical workers. Upperclassmen may apply for work as waiters in the dining halls.

Student-managed enterprises such as laundry and dry cleaning and flower concessions also create employment.

Students wishing employment have been asked to register with the employment office after registration for classes to plan their working hours around their schedules.
