Happy 'Hellos' to Hit Friendly Freshmen

By LYNN WARD

Today will probably be one of the friendliest days on campus students will ever witness.

Why this unique situation? Today is HELLO DAY. Freshmen men will be required to say, "hello," to all upperclassmen they pass during the days, and freshmen women will say, "hello," to all upperclasswomen.

This special day, designed to strengthen the hello spirit, will be in effect all over campus, not just on the "hello" walks of the Mall and Old Main area as tradition dictates.

The Freshman Customs Board has asked upperclass students to report to the Hetzel Union desk the frosh men and women who do not say hello to them.

Heather Lohrentz and Alvin Clemens, board co-chairmen, said the spirit and enthusiasm of this customs period is noticeably better than in previous years. Upperclassmen have not seemed to lose interest in the program this year, they said.

In the past the spirit of customs has lagged by the fourth or fifth day. Joint customs days were announced sporadically when the customs board believed the program needed a pick-up.

Eight customs violators appeared before the customs board last night to be questioned concerning their violations and to receive penalties.

Frank Mendenhall, freshman in aeronautical engineering from Chadds Ford, will be walking around campus today covered by a large sign which reads: "I now know east from west." The board decided this sign might encourage Mendenhall to stay off the west side of the Mall, where he was (Continued on page eight)

500 Army Tickets On Sale Monday

About 500 tickets for the Army football game will go on sale at 8 a.m. Monday at $4 each.

The tickets, primarily intended for students' families are for locations in the east stands between the goal line and the 10-yard line. They will be sold on a first-come, first-serve basis.

The Recreation Hall ticket office is open from 8 a.m. to noon and from 1 to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 8 a.m. to noon Saturdays.

Choice tickets are still on sale for the University of Pennsylvania game next Saturday at Philadelphia.

Leader Will Attend Walker Inaugural

Gov. George M. Leader will speak at Dr. Eric A. Walker's inauguration as the 12th president of the University on Oct. 3 in Recreation Hall.

Leader will represent the state, and three other persons will represent the students, the faculty and the alumni in greeting Walker.

Robert Steele, All-University president, will represent the students; M. Nelson McGeary, professor of political science, the faculty and staff, and Eugene T. Gramley, president of the Alumni Association, the alumni.

Former Froth Editor 'Hits Jackpot' on TV

A Penn Stater—and a former Froth editor, at that—may soon join the ranks of big-money quiz winners on television.

He is James Duniway, class of '49, and he started his climb last night by winning the championship on "Tic, Tac, Dough."

In his first appearance he rolled up a total of $1300 in 15 minutes, about twice as much as he collected in four years on Froth.

Asked whether he'd continue or collect his money, he cracked, "I'll go for broke." So Penn State well-wishers will have an opportunity to see him in action at 7:30 p.m. next Thursday.

Duniway's lasting claim to fame as an undergraduate was his "invention" of Spring Week, which, as few people now know, started as a Frothy promotion and a plug for a yarn manufacturer.

After graduation, Duniway landed in advertising agency work in New York, then migrated to Chicago, where he wrote copy for the Leo Burnett Agency.

A couple of years ago, he said, he decided to learn about things first hand by traveling. He has "knocked around" in 10 European countries, seen much of Asia and just returned from Australia, sporting a beard big enough to keep him a full foot away from the microphone.

A local friend said Duniway was planning to return to his old job in Chicago.

Wilson Orders Manpower Cut

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19 (AP)—Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson, to save money, today ordered another 100,000-man cut in the military forces.

He said, too, that 35,000 to 40,000 civilians will have to be dropped from defense payrolls.

"We couldn't wait any longer," Wilson told a news conference. "We are so close to the debt limit that the Treasury can't even borrow the money."

The legal limit on the national debt is $275 billion, a figure set by Congress.

While he cited the debt limit as a pressing factor, Wilson did not seem concerned by security aspects. He said the reduction can be achieved "without impairment of our national security."

The reduction was approved by President Dwight D. Eisenhower, the secretary reported.

Last July 16, Wilson ordered a 100,000-man cut in the military forces. That reduction, coupled with the new one today of the same size, would save an estimated one billion dollars.

The Defense Department is trying to keep all spending within $38 billion.

The two cuts together would bring the total armed strength down to 2,600,000 instead of the 2,800,000 which had been authorized for the fiscal year which began last July 1.

Another Cut
Wilson, who is retiring next month, said it would seem fair to assume that another cut will be attempted, perhaps in connection with budget plans to be submitted to Congress in January.

Today's 100,000-man cut is to be put into effect as soon as possible and not later than next June 30. Wilson said the services ought to be able to take it in stride, since they are already working out the first cut, with a deadline of Dec. 31.

Civilian Employees

The reduction of 35,000 to 40,000 in the number of civilian employees of the armed services would be on top of a 53,000 cut announced earlier.

The combined reduction of 88,000 to 93,000 civilian jobs would be from a total of 1,160,000 such positions. There was no separate estimate of the money savings expected on these.

Wilson said the newly-ordered 10,000 manpower cut among the services will mean that the Air Force will have to drop at least four wings, the Army will have to deactivate one additional division and the Navy will have to lay up more ships.

Anyone may attend the ceremony.

The National Anthem, played by organist George E. Ceiga, assistant professor of music, will open the program.

Dr. Luther H. Harshbarger, University Chaplain, will then deliver the Invocation.

4 to Greet Walker

Following this, Leader, Steele, McGeary and Gramley will greet the President.

George H. Deike, president of the Board of Trustees will then greet Walker's inauguration.

For the first time in the University's history a symbol of the Presidency will be used.

It is a mace carved from a wooden dowel retrieved from the original Old Main by Jesse Pennington, a retired maintenance worker. The mace was designed by Dr. E. L. Mattil, associate professor of art education.

3 to Carry Mace

The mace will be brought to the platform by David H. McKinley, University Marshal, and two assistant University Marshals, Dr. Hummel Fishburn, professor of music and music education, and Dr. John B. Nesbitt, assistant professor of civil engineering.

The mace will be delivered to Deike, who will invest Walker with it. After the ceremony the mace will be placed in the University archives.

After Walker's response, the program will be closed with the Alma Mater.

CHARLIE BROWN

Charlie is an inveterate worrier, frets over trifles. And he's convinced that nobody likes him. Most of all, he wants to be recognized by the other kids. So he's extremely friendly and polite—which doesn't often help. He's the lovable little fellow in Peanuts, one of America's greatest comic strips, beginning Tuesday in The Daily Collegian.
