

Leadership Training Will Begin Oct. 16

All-University Cabinet's training ground for future campus leaders, the Leadership Training program, will start this year on Oct. 16.

Registration for the course will begin Oct. 1 at the Hetzel Union desk. While the class usually is made up mostly of freshmen, Eugene Curry, chairman of the program, said other students are eligible and are encouraged to register.

Last year—its second year of operation—283 students completed the program.

At least that many students are expected to register this year, Curry said. Through a combination of lectures, demonstrations and practice sessions, the students will learn about the following phases of student government and student activities:

- Student government and its structure.
- Committee procedure and techniques.
- Getting into the various student activities.

In addition to these specialized discussions, certain classes will be devoted to explaining the University administration and its structure and the workings of parliamentary procedure.

One class, known as the "red tape special," is designed to streamline the work of committee chairmen by covering the procedures on getting and using the meeting rooms about campus.

The program was started in 1955 as a special committee of Cabinet with a view to eventually making it a prerequisite to positions in student government. No such rule has been set forth yet, however.

But Curry said, some student organizations ask their applicants if they have taken the course. Curry also said that some organizations are considering the possibility of requiring all their committee chairmen to enroll in the program.

The course will consist of eight classes during the period of Oct. 16 to Dec. 11. The classes will meet Wednesday nights in 119 Armsby.

THE NIGHT-BLOOMING CEREUS seems to be a shy type "night owl." This tropical flower of the Cactus family recently bloomed in one of the University greenhouses. The strange plant blooms once a year and then only at night. The flower begins to open at dusk and is in full bloom in two or three hours. By the next morning it is dead. The University owns three such plants, another of which is expected to bloom sometime next month.

Marbut's Wife Writes Novel On Educational Huckstering

Ann Marbut, wife of Frederick B. Marbut, professor of journalism, has written a new book, "The Tarnished Tower," to be released Oct. 14 by David McKay Co., Inc., publishers.

The story is one of "educational huckstering"—the selling of education by men and women just as the advertisers of cereals sell their products.

It tells of two college professors at a state university who forget that they deal with human beings and treat both education and its recipients as if they were commodities.

The principals, Jerry Ross, a political science instructor, and Ross Adams, assistant to the president, go so far in their attempt to take over control of the university from faltering President Nelson that they cause the death of one man and eventually the breaking up of Ross' own marriage.

Mrs. Marbut, who also wrote "A Bill of Particulars," graduated from the Washington College of Law. Before her marriage, she passed the District of Columbia Law Examination and was admitted to the bar.

During the Dark Ages, cats were roasted alive and dropped from high towers in an effort to do away with the spirits of witchcraft, according to the National Geographic Society.
