Engle Plans Continued Use Of Successful Platoon System

(Continued from page one) not yet anyway. However, I think we can develop into one as the season progresses.

Continuing along that line, he said, "We don't have that serious attitude that we had last year—and that was one of the reasons for our success."

This Penn-Penn State game is the 46th intercollegiate football meeting between the two schools. Although Penn holds the series advantage, 25-16-4, the Quakers' last victory came in 1953—a 13-7 win.

For today's tilt, only one of the Quaker backfield starters in 1956 will open against the Lions. He is Frank Riepl, a boy who spent his first two varsity seasons at halfback but will be at quarterback for Sebo today.

The Riepl switch is due, according to the reports from Penn, to the fact that Sebo is seeking to improve his passing attack—an attack which has proved far from adequate for the past two years when the Red and Blue gained only 310 and 319 yards respectively through the air.

Two sophomores are expected to open for the Quakers. They are halfback Fred Doelling and end Barney Berlinger. Jr. Doelling was the leading ground gainer on last year's frosh team while Berlinger was its leading end.

Young, incidentally, was ticketed for the regular fullback assignment last year but was injured in a pre-season scrimmage and was of little use the rest of the season. He was replaced by Dave Sikarskie, a reserve on this season's club.

One advantage the Penn team will have over the Lions, if it can be called exactly that, is that the Quakers went through one complete pre-season scrimmage with an opposing school—in this case, Rutgers.

The Lions, on the other hand, were limited to only intrasquad scrimmage for their 4-week practice session. Engle feels that this handicapped the preparation of his team greatly since, as he put it, "You can build for that scrimmage and then build from it."

Scrimmage or no scrimmage, Engle and staff will get to see their white-clad gridders in action for the first time this season—and this time, all the blue chips are on the line.

The probable starting lineups:

Notre Dame On Hot Spot

By the Associated Press
The season football debut of Notre Dame, a team on the hot spot, and vital inter-sectional games involving the ever potential Big Ten steal some attention today from the impending World Series, America's grandest sport-spectacle.

The Fighting Irish go to Lafayette, Ind., for a game with Purdue which might well set the 1957 pattern for Notre Dame and help fix the future of the team's one-time boy wonder coach, Terry Brennan.

Oklahoma, the No. 1 power, is idle, to everyone's relief.

One of the Big Ten's conflicts with the Pacific Coast, an old Rose Bowl patsy of 10 years standing, is the nationally televised game of the day between Northwestern and Stanford at Palo Alto, Calif.

Michigan is host to Southern California, beaten a week ago by Oregon State, and Minnesota plays Washington.

Injury to 2 Yank Stars Kindle Milwaukee Hopes

MILWAUKEE, Sept. 27 (AP)—Bill Skowron's doubtful status and the increasing suspicion that Mickey Mantle won't be fully recovered from his leg injury have kindled hope in many a Milwaukee heart the Braves will knock the New York Yankees off their lofty perch in the World Series.

Mantle's physical condition is one of the chief topics of conversation in the taverns and hotel lobbies. Nearly everyone has asked at one time or another in the past few days, "How's Mantle's leg? Not good, I hope."

The people remember the only time the Yankees have lost a World Series since 1942 was due to the unavailability of Mantle for the entire set in 1955.

Mantle was hobbled by leg injuries that kept him out of several games and limited his production in the others. The Yankees bowed to the Brooklyn Dodgers in seven games.

Skowron, hampered by a sore back, may miss the entire series. His absence means that first base will be shared by two left-handed hitters, Joe Collins and Harry Simpson. That is regarded as a break for the Braves, who are counting upon Warren Spahn, their southpaw ace, to pitch in at least two, or perhaps even three of the games.

With Skowron out and Mantleailing the Braves feel they have a great edge over the Yankees in the power department.

Three Home Games

Penn State's 1957 football team will perform before a home audience for three straight weeks, following Saturday's opener against Pennsylvania. The opponents, in order, will be Army, William and Mary, and Vanderbilt.

ED SULKOWSKI VISITS GERMANY

We talked to Eddie Sulkowski, an assistant trainer on the Lion coaching staff, a few days ago concerning his sojourn to Germany this summer under the auspices of the United States Army.

For those who are uninformed, Eddie spent part of his summer in Germany conducting a training clinic for our armed servicemen stationed in the Rhineland.

"How did you enjoy your trip?" I said to the ex-boxing coach when I cornered him last week in the training room underneath Beaver Field.

"It was great," he replied, "something that I'll always remember. I was gone for 21 days and I enjoyed myself the whole time."

"Well, give me a little rundown on your experiences?" I asked.

"I conducted a clinic in Nuremberg on the techniques of training," Ed said. "You know, taping ankles and so forth. I guess the whole clinic ran for about 10 days."

"There were 40 men at my clinic, and they came from many of the companies of the European Command. My clinic worked in conjunction with a football school conducted by the coaching staff of Tennessee—Boyden Wyatt and his three assistants."

"You see, the army decided to give the boys a little instruction on single wing football. And they wanted to have men available to treat any injuries that would occur when the men in the football clinic went back to instruct their individual outfits. That's why I had a training clinic which was the first of its type ever put on by the European Command."

"What did you do when not teaching?" I asked.

"Oh, we spent some time touring the country. I spent three days in Berlin and three days down at Garmish. That's the place where the Winter Olympics were held last year. They really treated us great. We had a staff car at our command at all times and we traveled with a Colonel's rating."

"I was really impressed with the reconstruction that has been done since the war. I was stationed there for 18 months during the war and I was really amazed at the rebuilding. Like in Nuremberg—you'd never have thought there had been a war."

"I didn't get to Berlin in the war and let me tell you, it was quite an education, especially going from the West zone of Berlin to the East. It's as different as night and day."

"There is no rebuilding to speak of in the East. It looks like the war had just ended. And at night it's really something. The West is all lit up, just like our cities, but the East is completely dark."

"Did you meet anyone you knew?" I asked.

"Yes I did," Ed answered. "I bumped into Jim Brewer and Bob Little. Brewer played basketball here (at Penn State) three or four years ago and Little was a soccer player. I heard that Rudy Marisa (a former Lion cager) was in Frankfurt, but I didn't get to see him."

"How did you happen to be selected for this job?"

"Well, it was through the contacts I had made while officiating in the All-Army Boxing Championships. I officiated the pre-Olympics at Fort Myers, Va., in 1956 and I was down at Fort Campbell, Kentucky, in March of this year."

"Incidentally, that's where I met Pete Rademacher. I first talked to him at the pre-Olympic bouts and I encountered him again in March."

"What did you think of him?" I said.

"He has quite a bit on the ball—a terrific personality. He could be a great pro boxer if it wasn't for his age. That's against him now."

"Back to your trip," I said. "What did you think of Bowden Wyatt?"

"He's a regular Joe," Ed replied. "And let me tell you, he wasn't a bit worried about the coming football season. I asked him what kind of a team he would have this year and he said it would be 'a pretty good ball club' but it wouldn't be as good as last year's team."

"Do you ever expect to go back to Germany again?" "I'd like to," Ed said, "they really treat you royally."

Stengel Silent on Maglie

BOSTON, Sept. 27 (AP)—New York Yankee Manager Casey Stengel said tonight he has made no request to make pitcher Sal Maglie eligible for the World Series.
