Student Injured In Tug-of-War Still in Hospital

Edwin "Ned" Kephart, who was hospitalized following last week's tug-of-war accident, remains in an "improved" condition at Centre County Hospital, Bellefonte.

Kephart, freshman in agricultural engineering from Norristown, is being treated for head injuries received when a 15-foot band director's tower was toppled after the tug-of-war.

Four freshman women were admitted to the University hospital. Carol Steever, arts and letters major from Elizabethtown, is still in the infirmary being treated for an ankle injury. Her condition is "improved."

Three others who were hospitalized and released this weekend are Arlene Tomich, arts and letters major from Donora; Joyce Shaffer, education major from Williamsport, and Suzanne Wertz, arts and letters major from Donora.
