

Tennis Courts to Open In Nittany-Pollock Area

Nittany-Pollock area tennis courts should be ready for use next week, barring unforeseen developments.

Walter W. Trainer, head of the division of landscape construction and maintenance, yesterday said fencing is being placed around the area and only a few posts must be installed before the courts will be opened.

The opening originally was scheduled for yesterday. The project was started in early May.

Trainer said all eight courts are marked. A top railing will be placed on the backstop poles and then a woven wire fencing will be stretched between the posts.

The special wall on the northern end of the courts will not be completed by next week, Trainer said. The 10-foot wall will be used for physical education instruction.

The new parking area west of Electrical Engineering Building has been completed. The landscaping director said the lot is open but no one as yet has been assigned to the area.

Trainer said University workmen are awaiting the end of construction work on the new women's residence halls so landscaping and seed planting may be started. The workmen are not able to start work now because of the union contract in which no non-union men can begin work until the union workmen are finished, according to University officials.

Grading is expected in a week for the four new units which have already been completed—Hibbs, Stephens, Haller and Lyons. Trainer said he hopes to have this completed by Homecoming Day, Oct. 19.

Grass seeding around the completed dorms will probably be done next spring. Other areas will not be planted until next fall.

Registration for the course will be open until Tuesday at the Hotel Union desk. Enrollment is limited to 320.

Eugene Curry, chairman for the program, said that upperclassmen are eligible and are encouraged to register, although usually most of the persons taking the course are freshmen.

Strong will base his discussion on research done by himself and devoted to practicing the principles set forth by speakers.

In one session, students will be broken down into small groups and given a topic to be discussed on a committee level.

An added feature to this year's program will be a class at the end of the course when students will be given answers to the questions they accumulate during the other seven classes.

Students who complete the eight classes in leadership training will receive a certificate and literature on campus politics and activities.

The classes will be conducted in an informal manner with time
