

72 Remain in Infirmary; Health Picture Unchanged

The number of students in the hospital has increased to 72, but Dr. Herbert R. Glenn, director of the University Health Center, said several of the new patients are fracture and sprain cases and that the University health situation is generally unchanged from Tuesday.

Prexy Sees Dormitory Expansion

President Eric A. Walker said that the University will have to build dormitories for at least 4000 students in every 5-year period between now and 1970.

Speaking at a meeting of the Pennsylvania Grange Tuesday in Reading, Walker said, "We have to build perhaps half again as many classrooms and dormitories as were built in the entire history of the University up to this point."

"It means that we shall have to add perhaps 800 faculty members to our staff, an almost impossible job even if we are able to match salaries being offered our brightest graduates by competing industrial and business concerns," Walker said.

He said that even with the strictest economics, it will mean large increases in state appropriations.

"If we are to expand—indeed, if we are to operate at all—the money must be given to us by some outside source," Walker said.

He explained that the outside source is the people of the Commonwealth, through appropriations made from tax revenue by the General Assembly.

Walker outlined the spirit of cooperation that has existed between the Grange and the University. He said that the cooperation has been going on since the Grange organized 84 years ago.

Barth Sees Reason for 'Despair'

By LIANNE CORDERO

If the Western world hopes to hold its own against Russian Communism, there is serious cause for concern in the current "literature of despair," Dr. John Barth said last night.

Speaking to the Philosophy Club, Barth called this literature "the most conspicuous and important of our time." Russian Communism, he said, "for all its vulgarity and brutality is still in a relatively heroic stage."

Communism can capture the allegiance of the thoughtful as well as the hungry, the exploited and the naive, Barth warned.

He compared today's Communist to "the decadent Westerner who sees the staggering complexity of ethical questions . . . and is vulnerable to a hesitation and incapacity for single-minded action."

Barth described a nihilistic confusion of the modern philosophers citing Existentialist Jean Paul Sartre, who "easily refutes the Marxist theory of history and subsequently joins the Communist Party with no apparent sense of inconsistency."

"The great question, of course, for those not yet so far gone as to smile bitter smiles and shrug their shoulders at the decline of the West, is what to do about it," Barth said.

"But," Barth said, "of the possible avenues of escape available to us, some I think we may not choose."

Two of these avenues, Barth suggested, are the "obscurantist or Billy Graham escape" and "Peale's Way: nothing is but thinking makes it so!"

The "Billy Graham escape," he explained, "is the notion that all we need to do is return the way we came, but most of us feel that for our culture as a whole, there is no turning back on the road we've traveled."

Students Fight War of Words In Classifieds

"For good results use Collegian Classifieds" and the result of two of these classifieds seems to be a "good" rivalry between students from Norristown and Lower Merion High Schools.

A classified on Oct. 17 under "Miscellaneous" announced that Norristown High School had beaten Lower Merion High School 7-6, ending Lower Merion's 33-game football winning streak.

Another "Miscellaneous" classified Oct. 22 blandly dismissed the victory with, "According to football experts, Norristown's victory over Lower Merion was a one in a million fluke."

Now it appears that the classifieds are not big enough to handle this rivalry.

Martin Gavetti, freshman in business administration from Norristown yesterday inquired at The Daily Collegian business office about display advertising costs.

Gavetti started the whole thing after Norristown High School students called him and told him of the victory.

Now Gavetti has a copy of a poem by a Norristown High School student, which describes very vividly the defeat of Lower Merion. This he wants to place as a display ad, so that not only former Norristown students will see it but also other students at the University, especially Lower Merion fans.

Display ads cost more than classifieds. So Gavetti will attempt to raise the money from Norristown students at the University.

Froth Continues Duping Students

"There's a sucker born every minute," said P. T. Barnum.

This old adage must still hold true since Froth had an "enthusiastic student response" (according to Froth) yesterday.

Because of this response, the campus humor (?) magazine will be sold only at the Hetzel Union desk today.

Sales will begin this morning and continue until copies or customers run out.

Dates Set for Visit Of Four Russians

The four Russians who will visit the University as part of a tour of three states told a Rotary Club meeting in Cumberland, Md., they would arrive in State College about next Wednesday or Thursday.

The University received a letter yesterday from the Russian Embassy in Washington requesting permission for a visit.

The University replied with a welcome and a request for more definite information on the purpose and time of the visit.

The general purpose of the visit, as stated by the Associated Press, will be to enable the diplomats to get a better picture of American life.

The four plan to visit Parkersburg, Morgantown and Clarksburg, in West Virginia; Zanesville, Cleveland and Warren, in Ohio; and Sharon, Altoona, State College and Williamsport, in Pennsylvania.

The University has planned no program for the Russians' visit, since it learned officially of the visit only yesterday. A University spokesman said the four probably will be permitted to investigate anything that interests them during their stay.

The four are Vladimir Lavrov, Counselor at the Embassy, and Anatolii N. Goryachev, Sergei A. Bobomolov and Valerian V. Mikhailov, secretaries.

This will be the second time Russians have visited the University this semester. About two months ago, a Russian delegation visited the Department of Physics.

The delegation was received then by Dr. John A. Sauer, head of the Department of Physics.

Lavrov, speaking to the Cumberland Rotary Club, said Russia is a center of strength in a world of tensions.

In a reversal from "Sputnik diplomacy," he said, "We are ready to destroy our intercontinental ballistic missile immediately if all powers are willing to do the same."

Yearbook Rated High in Judging At Missouri

The 1957 LaVie, senior class annual, has been rated "excellent" in the annual judging by the National School Yearbook Association at Columbia, Mo.

The judges rated the book high for its excellent photography, good printing job, and over-all appearance. In the opinion of the judges, write-ups were well handled, especially in the sports section. Dividers and sub-dividers with four-color art work on the dividers were well planned.

The book was edited by William D. McCann, pre-medical student from Hershey, with James M. Mullen, student in applied arts from Pittsburgh, as art editor.
