Judges Make Choice From 27 Contestants

Five coeds have been chosen from a field of 27 to contend for the title of Junior Prom Queen.

No-Rotation Vote Cast By Panhel

Panhellenic Council last night unanimously voted against retention of the present independent-fraternity rotation system.

Mary Neel, senior in physical education from Irwin, presented a motion favoring retention. It was defeated.

Phyllis Hodges, senior in bacteriology from Meadville, was appointed chairman of a committee to revise the constitution. Members of the committee are Mimi Lyon, senior in education from Pittsburgh, and Patricia Pilet, senior in home economics from Johnstown.

In a discussion of informal rush, suggestions were made that averages be put on the master list of rushees and that a more rapid system of sending bids and receiving replies be used.

Members were asked to give suggestions to the Panhel rush chairman for improvement of the handbook used for formal rush. They were also asked to submit pictures to be used in the handbook and the names of members to model for a page picturing clothes suitable for the rush parties.

The president of each sorority will attend coffee hours which are held each week by the dean of men's office.

Banner Contest Planned For W.Va. Pep Rally

A banner contest with an award for the best fraternity or sorority banner and another for the best independent banner will be featured at the West Virginia game pep rally Friday.

Groups entering a banner will meet at Recreation Hall at 6:45 p.m. Friday.

Collegian Candidates

Candidates for the editorial staff of The Daily Collegian staff will meet at 6:45 tonight in 9 Carnegie.

Miss Ray, home economics major from Huntingdon Valley, has appeared on floats in the Bay Parade in Ocean City, N.J. for the last three years.

Miss Ottinger, liberal arts major from Glennolden, has been one of five high school seniors chosen to crown the May Queen at the Glennolden High School.

Miss Kersh, an elementary education major from Short Hills, N.J., was a finalist in a campus cover girl contest when she was a student at Western College, Oxford, Ohio.

Miss Lohrentz is a liberal arts major from Mt. Lebanon.

Miss Guyer is a music education major from Altoona.

The Junior Prom Queen contest is sponsored each year by the junior class.

This year's queen will be crowned at intermission at the Junior Prom which will be held Friday evening in Recreation Hall.

At the crowning, the queen will receive a gold trophy and gifts donated by several State College merchants.

The names of judges for the contest, several faculty members and downtown merchants, were not disclosed.

The prom will feature the orchestra of Woody Herman and will be held from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m.

Tickets are $5 a couple and will go on sale the day of the dance at the Hetzel Union desk.

Foreign Scientists Assist in Research

Two scientists from other countries are serving for short periods with the staff of the Ionosphere Research Laboratory.

Dr. W. Becker, of the Institute for Ionospheric Research in Lindau, Germany, will spend a month here, and Dr. A. P. Mitra, executive secretary of the Radio Research Committee of the National Physical Laboratory, New Delhi, India, will be here for three months.

Dr. Mitra, who had previously served on the faculty, is also executive secretary of the Indian Geophysical Year Committee.

Clique Heads To Present Platforms

The political merry-go-round will speed up tonight when clique chairmen William O'Neill of Lion party and Gary Young of Campus party present the party platforms to the All-University Elections Committee.

The committee will meet with the clique chairmen at 7 p.m. in 213 Hetzel Union.

The planks of the platforms will be discussed by the Elections Committee with O'Neill and Young present, according to Chairman Peter Fishburn.

If the committee decides by a two-thirds vote that a plank is outside the scope of political parties, the clique chairman may change it. However, if he stands by the original wording, the disputed plank will be taken before All-University Cabinet tomorrow night for a vote.

The amended version of any planks not approved by Elections Committee tonight and not taken before Cabinet will be reviewed by the committee at 6:30 p.m. Sunday in 218 HUB.

The Elections Committee tonight also will check the transcripts of the parties' nominees for sophomore class offices. A 2.4 All-University average is required by the Elections Code.

Flu Analysis--

The laboratory is the official clearing house for the state in determining if flu cases are the Asian variety or not.

A laboratory spokesman was unable to give a county-by-county breakdown of the 136 confirmed cases.

He said laboratory tests, begun during the summer, have uncovered no death directly caused by flu of any type.

All reported deaths have been from after-effects-complications of the disease. To date a total of 89 persons in the Keystone State have died from complications which set in after flu struck.

LA Constitution OK'd In Stormy Session

By RALPH MANNA

By a 17-4 vote—and after lengthy debate—the Liberal Arts Student Council last night adopted a revised constitution.

Probably the most controversial issue of the stormy session was a revised section restricting voting along fraternity-sorority lines in the election of officers.

The proposal finally adopted by the council—a section from the old council constitution—reads:

"No two consecutive (council) presidents shall be from the same fraternity or sorority."

This was substituted for a section in the revised constitution which reads:

"... members of any social fraternity, social professional fraternity or sorority shall split one vote equally among those members present."

At least three main points of view were fervently expressed and hotly debated during the one hour forty-five minute hassle:

Some members said they believed the section in the revised constitution should be kept. Others felt the section in the old constitution should be substituted. Still others felt neither section should be included.

Proponents of the revised section said it would guard against fraternity or sorority control and domination of the council.

Opponents of this section felt it was unfair and undemocratic. They believed every member should be entitled to one full vote in the election of officers. They said such a voting plan also should apply to other campus organizations.

James Jimmiro, senior in arts and letters from Abington, who favored Greek restriction, moved that the section from the old constitution be substituted for the new section.

Jimmiro, himself a member of a fraternity, said:

"Even though there is only one chance in 1000 that two consecutive council presidents will be from the same fraternity or sorority, there is still more ethnocentricity among these groups than in other campus organizations."

Opponents of the section from the old constitution believed a capable person should not be held back from the presidential post merely because the previous president was from the same fraternity or sorority.
