5 Finalists Named For Indie Contest

Five coeds have been selected as finalists in the Indie Sweetheart Queen Contest.

The finalists were chosen from a field of 25 independent women by nine members of the Association of Independent Men and Leonides, who served as judges.

They are:

Betty Kohudic, freshman in psychology from Frackville.

Miss Kohudic had been chosen as a finalist in the May Queen and Snow Queen Contests in her home town high school.

Marilyn Siefert, freshman in arts and letters from Pittsburgh.

Miss Siefert was a candidate for the Homecoming Queen Contest.

Jane Raazer, freshman in arts and letters from Rosemont.

Elaine Zeller, freshman in theater arts from Kingston.

Miss Zeller also was a candidate for the recent Homecoming Queen Contest.

Joyce Pattison, freshman in psychology from Elkland.

The queen will be named and crowned tonight at the Indie Week's Halloween dance in the Hetzel Union ballroom.

Judges appointed to select the queen are Edith H. Anderson, assistant to the dean of women and adviser to Leonides; William B. Crafts, assistant to the dean of men and adviser to AIM; R. N. Krecker, counselor in the Division of Counseling; Lorraine Jablonski, president of Leonides, and John Morgan, president of AIM.

The Halloween dance, which will be held from 7 to 9 tonight, will be the highlight of Indie Week and is sponsored by AIM and Leonides.

A 13-piece orchestra will provide music at the dance and will feature round and square dancing.

Admission is free and the dance is open to the public.

Other events planned for Indie Week include a game night beginning at 7 p.m. Thursday on the ground floor of the HUB.

Indie Week will conclude on Friday evening when AIM and Leonides will co-sponsor a pep rally.

His topic is on the effects of the recently concluded agreements concerning the formation of a common market in Europe.

Students Finish Project Plans For State Park

Twenty seniors in landscape architecture have completed as a class project, the development plans of the Glendale State Park area, about three miles northeast of Patton, approximately 75 miles from the University.

The 6000-acre park which will surround a 1760-acre lake is also being developed by the State Department of Forests and Waters. The area will provide bathing, boating, fishing and camping opportunities for people within a 50-mile radius of the park.

Wayne H. Wilson, professor of landscape architecture, is in charge of the curriculum and is assisted in the project by Kenneth J. Polanowski and Glenn E. Styers, assistant professors of landscape architecture.

IFCPA: Present and Future

Food Purchases, Delivery Handled for Fraternities

Second of a Series
Editorial on Page 4

The Interfraternity Council Purchasing Association, in providing food supplies for its 24 member fraternities, handles all details from ordering the food to its actual delivery.

The association provides meat, frozen food, and canned goods for member fraternities.

The purpose of the association is to provide facilities and personnel for fraternities to buy food as a single large body, and to provide the food at special low prices.

Although the program is in its first semester, it has already shown savings in food budgets for the member fraternities, according to James Burns, chairman of IFCPA.

A saving of from 15 to 35 per cent of retail prices of meat can be made by buying through IFCPA vendors, Burns said.

A substantial savings also is possible on canned goods, Burns said, because the association purchases them from vendor at costs plus five per cent.

IFCPA products are bought from various vendors. Meat products come from Swift and Co. and from a local vendor, Cold Inc.

Canned goods are purchased from companies in Huntingdon and Altoona, Pa., Burns said, and frozen foods from Cold Inc. in State College.

The canned goods include a variety of brand names, all of the same quality or better than those available locally, Burns said.

Each of the IFCPA vendors delivers the products to the individual fraternities.

Orders for food are placed by fraternity cooks or caterers, either to the IFCPA office or in the case of State College vendors directly to the vendors concerned.

IFCPA began the semester by collecting a deposit from each member fraternity. The board of directors asked each fraternity to estimate their food costs for one month, and then use half that amount as a deposit.

This deposit remains in the IFCPA fund for the entire year, and fraternities are billed twice monthly for meats and frozen foods and once monthly for canned goods.

Burns said the financial setup has been "highly successful" since the association began operating.

AIM Governors Cancel Meeting for Tonight

The Association of Independent Men Board of Governors will not meet tonight.

The meeting has been cancelled because of the Indie Week's Halloween dance, sponsored by AIM and Leonides.
