

LA Council Blasts Co-ed CD Plan, Compulsory ROTC

By DICK FISHER

The Liberal Arts Student Council last night unanimously approved a resolution condemning the proposed combined co-educational civil defense-Reserve Officers Training Corps program and—at the same time—the current required ROTC program.

Although the resolution asked the University Senate to reject the ROTC-CD proposal, it did advocate a 1-semester course in civilian defense.

This course would be similar to the present survival training now given men students and would be included in both the men's and women's required physical education programs.

One of the main reasons for the resolution, which was backed jointly by a number of student council members and presented by Louis Phillips, junior in political science from Clairton, was objection to inclusion of the proposed program in a School of Military Science and Civilian Defense under the College of Liberal Arts.

Other reasons cited included:

- That a proposed study of a more widespread exchange of military and civilian instructors which could have "disastrous results" in non-military courses, in their content, in the quality of instruction and in the actual "teaching methods."

- That compulsory military training is a "flagrant violation of academic and educational freedom" as well as a "colossal waste of University funds, of desperately needed classroom space and—most important—of students' precious time."

- That the report of the Senate committee did not represent the opinion of the majority of the students, faculty members, administrators or trustees and that it was inadequately prepared since it did not mention details of the proposed program and its implementation.

According to the resolution, establishing a School of Military Affairs and Civilian Defense in the College of Liberal Arts would be damaging to the program and public relations of the college and the University and would lower the college "in the eyes of faculty members, college associations and the public."

Also, giving the ROTC programs the rank of a school "... would be to grossly overrate ROTC," partly because since it would not include a major field of study.

The council also said compulsory ROTC, contrary to the opinion of the Senate committee, does not contribute significantly to citizenship education.

Stevenson To Advise NATO Ties

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12 (AP)—The White House and Adlai Stevenson announced today — after considerable confusion — that he will act as Democratic consultant on pulling the Atlantic alliance closer together.

The confusion resulted from an error by Presidential Press Secretary James C. Hagerty, who told newsmen this morning that Stevenson had refused to do anything more than comment on the program after it was all prepared by the administration.

This afternoon Hagerty acknowledged the error, and said that in fact Stevenson would consult on the program as it was being developed for presentation to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization at Paris Dec. 16.

Hagerty said Stevenson "will be kept informed of the developing program and will, we hope, discuss the items in the program with the administration before they are finalized. These comments will be more in the nature of consultations while the program is being prepared, not just public statements after the program is completed."

This announcement from Hagerty, shortly after 3 p.m., straightened out nearly day-long uncertainty. Stevenson himself had sought, in a statement from New York City, to clarify the situation.

The upshot was that Stevenson emerged in an advisory role on foreign affairs. It marked his first association with the administration after previously declining to become a member of the U.S. delegation to the United Nations or of a new civil rights commission.

Officials said Stevenson could go with Eisenhower and Secretary of State John Foster Dulles to Paris next month, if he wants to.

Hagerty told reporters at a 3:15 p.m. news conference he was "redfaced" about his error.

Clarification Requested On Future of Hotel Ad

By MARY KELLY

The Home Economics Student Council last night unanimously agreed to ask the administration to clarify rumors that the School of Hotel Administration may be dropped.

David Allison, junior in hotel administration from Pittsburgh, in bringing the question before the council, said students in the school would like to know the administration's position on the question.

He said they also would like to know if there is anything they can do to keep the school in operation.

Council members suggested getting the State Hotel and Restaurant Association to back the school and having parents write to Grace M. Henderson, dean of the College of Home Economics, and to President Eric A. Walker.

Allison said he has heard reports that the association will not back the school as long as it is under the Home Ec college since they think it should be under the College of Business Administration.

But, he said a professor in business administration in an informal discussion told him the Business Administration College does not want the school.

The reasons the professor gave, Allison said, were that the college did not want to be bothered with foods courses and that it already was overcrowded.

Miss Henderson said the school may be transferred to the College of Business Administration in a speech last month to the Hotel Greeters Club.

Lee Reider, senior in hotel administration from Coronado, Calif., read a letter to the council that his father had received from Miss Henderson after he had inquired about the future of the school.

In the letter Miss Henderson said that the future of the school was uncertain but that the school would be continued until all students now enrolled had been graduated.

In other business, the council voted to make the three freshman who placed sixth, seventh and eighth in the freshman council elections alternate representatives.

The three are Susan First, home economics major from Harrisburg; Eleanor Rosenberger, home economics major from Bay Village, Ohio; and Lewis H. Brown, hotel administration major from York.

Clique Chairmen Urge Voting As Frosh-Soph Elections Begin

By PAT EVANS

Freshmen and sophomores will vote today and tomorrow for their class officers, bringing the current "politicking" season to a close.

Elections will be held from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. in the Hétzel Union card room. Students will have their matriculation cards punched as they vote. They will use paper ballots and may vote by party or split the ticket.

William Surgner, Lion party's candidate, will oppose George Thompson, Campus party, for the office of freshman class president. Running for sophomore president are Steven Ott, Campus, and Donald Smith, Lion.

Other candidates running on the Lion ticket are Howard Wolfley, sophomore vice president; Nancy Kress, sophomore secretary-treasurer; John Fenimore, freshman vice president; and Ruth Noble, freshman secretary-treasurer.

Peter Fishburn, chairman of the All-University Elections Committee, said voting will be conducted by the committee in the following manner:

Voters will form two parallel lines as they enter the card room, with sophomores on the left and freshmen on the right. They will show their matriculation cards to Elections Committee members sitting at the polls, and the cards will be punched to the right of itory dining halls. He said both parties' candidates had spoken in the dining halls.

This is against a Foods Service regulation, Fishburn said. "But he added, "Everybody was ignorant of the fact, so we can't do much about it." He said neither the parties nor Elections Committee had known of the regulation during the campaigns.

Cool Weather, Rain Expected

A tawny streak was seen flashing across the Mall early today. It was the Nittany Lion.

"Where on earth are you going?" a friend asked.

"It's not on earth I'm going," said the Lion breathlessly. "A bunch of engineers are trying to catch me so they can send me up in a satellite," he cried.

"Quit blubbering all over me," his friend said. "They wouldn't do anything like that." The skeptical Lion, however, continued his flight.

If the Lion spins through space later today, he may get a glimpse of students shivering in the 52-degree air and preparing for tonight's predicted rainfall.
