Rain Predicted to Wash Blue, Gold Paint Off Lion

Speckled with blue and gold paint, the Nittany Lion was roaring viciously around campus today. The Lion, with teeth bared, is up in claws because someone—Pitt's colors are blue and gold—painted his statue and left some of the paint drip down while he was sleeping under it. Campus patrolmen discovered the paint about 5:45 a.m. Sunday.

The statue is in relatively good shape since it has a special protective coating to prevent paint from seeping into the porous rock.

But the Lion was out in the rain all day trying vainly to wash the paint from his fur. Rumor has it he may just paint the yellow spots white for the Pitt game.

The Lion will have a chance to wash off the paint since rain is forecast again today. Mild temperatures are predicted: 60-64 degrees.

Ceramics Prof Receives Grant

Dr. Allan W. Taylor, assistant professor of ceramic technology, has received a grant of $9000 from the National Science Foundation to support a research program on the influence of wetting agents on clays for a period of two years.

Many of the organic chemicals used as wetting agents, such as detergents, are known to be absorbed by clay particles and to produce marked changes in the physical properties of the colloidal suspensions made by mixing clay and water.

Dr. Taylor is attending the annual meeting of the American Society of Agronomy in Atlanta, Georgia, this week where he will present a paper, "Some Equilibrium Solutions on Rothamsted Soils."

ICG Will Meet Tonight

Dr. Ralph B. Manikam, Bishop of Tranquebar, India, said the West is under a debt to the East to send missionaries to teach Christianity.

Manikam, delivering Sunday's chapel sermon, quoted the three missionary concepts of St. Paul, explaining each of them in modern terms.

The first concept is "I am a debtor to the Greeks, barbarians, the wise and the unwise." Manikam said, "A missionary should not think in terms of doing an act of charity, but as the payment of a debt to God through mankind. The world situation might be reversed if St. Paul had been sent to Egypt instead of to the West."

The second concept is "I am ready to preach to the Greeks and the Romans." Manikam said the World Mission has come about because of preaching in the four corners of the world.

Manikam said, "Asia is going through a great turmoil of change. The map of Asia is being completely re-drawn. Seven-hundred million people have gained their political freedom in the last 10 years. These peoples are busy building their own nations."

However, Manikam said, a sense of pessimism concerning a third world war hovers over the peoples of Europe.

Manikam said many economic changes are taking place in India. "India is struggling to bridge the gap between the rich and the poor. The maharajahs are extremely wealthy, yet the majority of the people live in poverty. Communism works well in such a situation."

Many social changes are taking place also. Among these are the extinction of the caste system and the emancipation of womanhood.

The third concept is "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ."

Pitt Symphony To Play Tonight

The highly-rated Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra will open the State College Concert Association series at 8:30 tonight in Schwab Auditorium with a program including the works of four composers.

The orchestra, which, according to one New York reviewer, doesn't have to "take a back seat (to anyone)," held its annual concert in New York City's Carnegie Hall two weeks ago.

Opening with Symphony No. 40 in G Minor by Mozart, the orchestra will then play "La Mer" by Debussy, "Don Juan," a tone poem from Opus 20 by Richard Strauss, and the suite from "Le Coq d'Or" by Rimsky-Korsakov.

Ed Council Will Meet

Kay Kegel, junior in elementary education from Mechanicsburg, will report on proposed "big-little sister" program at a meeting of the Education Student Council at 7 tonight in 204 Burrowes.
