

Eng Faculty, Students to Present Skits

Both faculty members and students of the College of Engineering and Architecture will have a chance to display their talents in skits at the student-faculty mixer at 7 tonight in the Hetzel Union ballroom.

The mixer, which is sponsored by the Engineering and Architecture Student Council, is being held to promote better relations between faculty members and students in the college.

Faculty members will present a skit depicting students interviewing for jobs and the students will present a parody on professors.

The versatile faculty members also have made up a quartet. Dr. John B. Nesbitt, assistant professor of civil engineering; Richard C. Adams, assistant professor of mechanical engineering; John E. LeFrancois, associate professor of engineering research; and Robert H. Ramsey, professor of engineering research, will make up the quartet.
