

Senate Hears Recommendation On Extended Summer Courses

Chairman Fred M. Coombs of the Senate Committee on Calendar yesterday read a committee recommendation that departments consider providing a 9- to 12-week program in the summer, since no revisions of the calendar could be effective before 1961.

The same recommendation was made at the beginning of this semester and department heads were asked to submit opinions on such a proposal.

Response from department heads on this matter has been slight, Lawrence E. Dennis, vice-president for academic affairs said on Dec. 13.

The Senate Committee on Calendar is working on recommendations for a revised University calendar—either a trimester or quarter system.

A broader summer session is also being considered as an alternative to an extended revision, such as a trimester or quarter system would involve.

Under a trimester system, there would be three equal terms distributed over a complete calendar year, and under a quarter system, four such terms.

These systems, then, would make fuller use of the University's facilities in the light of an expected sharp rise in the number of college-age men and women in the next few years.

The committee probably will make a report to the Senate on long range calendar policy Coombs said, after the results are in from a survey of student opinion being conducted by Peter Fishburn, student representative on the committee.

Fishburn has said he expects to have the results of the student poll sometime in March. He said he expects to start sending out questionnaires around the beginning of next semester.

The purposes of the poll, Fishburn said, are to determine what proportion of students would attend each session of a quarter system, a trimester system and a system of two semesters plus an 11-week summer term, and to learn how a revised calendar would affect students' summer jobs.

Senators agreed to invite all student members of Senate committees and subcommittees to attend Senate meetings for the rest of the year.

Insurance Vote

The two other insurance companies were contacted and they offered to submit revised bids by Sunday night. "Companies are really anxious to get our business," Wonderly said.

The revised programs will be compared Sunday night, and one will be submitted to Cabinet Monday night. If it is then approved by Cabinet and subsequently by the Senate committee it will go into effect next semester, Wonderly said.

Several Cabinet members suggested that the possibility be investigated of including optional spouse and maternity benefits in the finally accepted plan.

Roger Levin, vice president of Mineral Industries Student Council, was sworn in last night as the council's Cabinet representative. He replaces Stratton. Richard Moon, chairman of Tribunal, conducted the swearing-in ceremony.

Spring Week Plans Get Senate Approval

The Spring Week Committee was given the go-ahead on plans yesterday when the Senate Committee on Student Affairs approved the new 3-day Spring Week schedule.

Under the new schedule for Spring Week, to be held April 28 to May 2, the float parade will be held from 6 to 8 p.m. Monday followed by the He-Man contest from 8 to 10 p.m.

The deadline for Tuesday night's Carnival has been extended to midnight. Previously the Carnival closed at 11 p.m. Wednesday night has been reserved as a rain date for Monday or Tuesday night's events.

The coronation of Miss Penn State and the Spring Week awards program will be held Thursday starting at 7 p.m.

The Senate Committee rejected the first Spring Week schedule before Christmas on the basis that it was planned for four days and the committee thought it should be cut to three days.

James Jimirro, Spring Week Chairman, has announced the appointment of the following students to committees.

5 Organizations Support Service Group Revival

A move to revive the local branch of World University Service, dropped with Campus Chest last year, is gaining momentum with the addition of five campus organizations to its ranks.

The five groups, University Christian Association, the International Relations Club, the Newman Club, the Hillel Foundation and the Cosmopolitan Club, have agreed to sponsor a WUS drive on campus.

The Rev. Preston N. Williams, assistant University chaplain and a leader of the WUS drive, said members of these groups are visiting meetings of other campus organizations in an attempt to enlist their aid in the project. The drive is looking for the aid of "as many organizations as are interested," Williams said.

The World University Service is an international organization dedicated to "mutual assistance in meeting the most crucial needs of the university community throughout the world." The group was born as an aftermath of World War I, and has included in its services in recent years such projects as flood relief for Asian countries, financial aid to Hungarian refugees and opening of health centers in many parts of the world.

The service is a fund-raising organization, and the local group would be able to designate the field to which the money would be sent, Williams said.

He said the two campus service organizations, Alpha Phi Omega and Gamma Sigma Sigma, have agreed to supply manpower for the drive.

The University chapter of WUS died last year when Campus Chest was dropped by All-University Cabinet. The service group when it was allied with the Chest was not, however, a "separate and identifiable group," Williams said.

When the drive has enlisted the support of other campus groups according to Williams, representatives from each group will form a committee to handle WUS. The committee will first have to acquaint students with the purpose of WUS, and then will conduct campaigns to raise funds, he explained.

Confused Culture Finds Ad Space

Some days, nothing seems to go right. A Daily Collegian advertisement this week tried to bring widespread attention to WDFM's Forum of the Air program, and so came forth proclaiming, "Culture at Last."

And Alton Kendall, chairman of the All-University Cabinet culture committee, was listed as Alton Quimble. To top things off, the ad was run Wednesday, the day after the show.

Dr. Albert Christ-Janer, who had nothing to do with the ad, placed by WDFM, said his office was flooded by calls from irate culture-lovers.

Approved Fraternities

All fraternities are approved for the entertainment of women guests tonight and tomorrow night except Alpha Phi Alpha, Alpha Tau Omega, Kappa Alpha Psi, Omega Psi Phi, Pi Lambda Phi, and Zeta Beta Tau.

Phi Kappa Psi has been approved for tonight only. Beta Theta Pi, Pi Sigma Upsilon have been approved for tomorrow night only.
