Penn Prof To Discuss Social Work

Dr. William D. Turner, professor of administration and social relations in the School of Social Work at the University of Pennsylvania, will speak at 8 p.m. tonight in 121 Sparks.

The subject of his lecture will be, "Social Work in a Dynamic World." It is being presented as one of the Graduate School Series and is co-sponsored by the College of the Liberal Arts.

Turner is a psychologist through his studies at the University of Illinois and Harvard University, his teachings and research at Kansas State College, Bryn Mawr and Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and his research in abnormal psychology and in delinquency in Philadelphia and Boston.

His interest in administration began with his regional directorship with the U.S. Public Health Service's Occupational Morbidity and Mortality Study. It extended through four years of business consulting in personnel administration.

In 1948, he became dean of the School of Social Work at the University of Pennsylvania and under his guidance the doctoral program in social work was established.

He resigned as dean last year to devote more time to teaching and research.

His most recent work is "Extending the Theoretical Base of Education for Social Work" in which he points the way to the theoretically diversified teaching which he believes his field increasingly and urgently requires.

Yale Chaplain Speaks

Futility in Life's Battle Cited

By BONNIE JONES
Student response to life is often futile since "one man's opinion is of little or no account in the fierce struggle for power today," according to the Rev. Sidney Lovett, who gave the chapel sermon Sunday in Schwab Auditorium.

Mr. Lovett, known as "Uncle Sid" to his students for more than a quarter of a century, is pastor of the 200-year-old Church of Christ at Yale, professor of Biblical literature and master of Pierson College at Yale University. He told University students that today as in the time of Christ there is a clash between two different patterns of power.

In Biblical times, he said, on the one hand the Caesar ruled by domination over others. Opposed to this iron rule, Jesus shared power with others. "The hallmark of his power was cooperation and the fruits were a sound mind and love."

But today two similar patterns are in conflict for world power in America, he said. One line of thought advocates selfish nationalism, a kind of superior American version of the master race. Struggling against this pattern are those who believe in intelligent internationalism and a new American creed with justice for all.

Mr. Lovett said the individual re-enters the picture as he receives God as a second self, then man is empowered with Divine association and cooperation. He described this personal power as balancing the equation between the power over others and power with others.

Mr. Lovett, who will retire at the end of this year, developed his own pattern of religion at Yale. When he became chaplain in 1932 religion was at a low ebb in all colleges. He faced only three students in the lone undergraduate religion course. Today one out of every six Yale undergraduates is voluntarily taking a course in religion.

Froth's Humor Makes Comeback

Fraternities and sororities are the intended subjects of Froth's spring "comeback," and while there is probably a great deal of humor to be found, it won't be in Froth.

Sixteen stereotypes of Greek members will "enhance" the issue which will also contain party pictures. The only thing that Froth is definite about is that Nancy Seaman, senior in art education from Ebensburg and a member of Kappa Delta, will be the girl of the month.

Brewster to Be Guest On 'Open to Question'

Dr. R. Wallace Brewster, professor of political science, will be guest on "Open to Question" at 8:30 tonight on WDFM.

A panel of students will question Brewster on United World Federalism and the position of political science in the University curriculum.

Wyand to Speak Today On Growth of University

C. S. Wyand, vice president for development, will speak to members of the State College Chamber of Commerce at noon today in the Hotel State College.

His topic will be "A Dozen Years of University Growth."
