Penn Prof Says

Broad Education Helps Social Field

A modern education in social work should stress knowledge rather than skill on the undergraduate level, according to Dr. William D. Turner of the University of Pennsylvania.

Speaking before a Graduate Lecture Series audience, Turner said that too much stress has been put on experience in undergraduate years, leaving a lack of general knowledge for social workers.

Turner is a professor of administration and social relations in the School of Social Work at Penn.

Turner said that skilled graduates often lack a knowledge of broad ideas essential to the field. However, one without any discussion session in which student opinion will be obtained on the present method of interesting graduates in the Alumni Fund.

The present system involves enlisting one student class agent for each 15 students in a class of about 2000 graduates.

These class agents write letters to their 15 students soliciting contributions to the fund.

To talk it over with the students will be Lehman; Ridge Riley, executive secretary-treasurer of the Alumni Association; Bernard P. Taylor, executive director of the Penn State Foundation; Robert E. Beam, assistant director of the Penn State Foundation; and Robert Ostermayer, chairman of the Alumni Fund and president of the Pennsylvania Industrial Chemical Co., Clairton.

The Alumni Fund, in existence since 1952, is approaching its one-millionth dollar.

Through its fund-raising campaigns, it has aided student recreation, religion and scholarship.

The furnishings for the Hetzel Union Building were bought with $65,000 of Alumni Fund money. Alumni contributions paid for more than one-half of the Helen Eakin Eisenhower Chapel.

There are 60 students on campus with Alumni Fund scholarships.

The present major project of the fund is the Stone Valley recreational area.

Bridge Lessons To Be Offered

Leonides Council will sponsor bridge lessons tonight and Feb. 20 and 27.

They will be free and open to anyone. Interested students may sign up at the Hetzel Union desk. The lessons will consist of an hour of explanation and an hour of bridge playing.

The council decided Monday to work with the Association of Independent Men for a Spring Week booth. It was decided to make it compulsory for council members to work on the booth and to raise the amount of points given members who help.

Book Includes Walker Article

President Eric A. Walker is a contributor to "Brainpower Quest," the recently published record of the Cooper Union Convocation he participated in 15 months ago.

The book, published by MacMillan Company, is the consensus of the meeting of scholars, scientists and men of affairs held in 1956 to discuss the question of providing more engineers and scientists for the needs of the future.

Former President Herbert Hoover, Admiral Lewis L. Strauss of the Atomic Energy Commission, and United States Steel President Roger M. Blough are among the other contributors.

New Party Leaders Plan Class Elections

Faced with a possible coup d'etat from the outside, the University party executive committee last night planned to keep the class party offices "in the family" at Sunday's election.

At the elections for party officers last Sunday, a group including members of fraternities affiliated with Lion party missed by a bare margin of 14 votes in an attempt to take over the chairmanship of the newly formed University party.

John D'Angelo, party chairman, said officials indicated that the University party would not have its charter approved if an outside group succeeded in taking control.

John D'Angelo, University party chairman, warned his executive committee last night that "the same thing is liable to happen" Sunday night when the party elects its 20 class officers. "We only won half a victory this past Sunday in our attempt to keep control of our own party," D'Angelo said.

To stymie a possible second attempt from "our friends from the other side," D'Angelo advised all members of the executive committee to run for one of the class offices, with only one running for each office to keep the vote unified.

Some of the members of the committee objected to this as an undemocratic move, especially if it were done in the meeting.

Edward Frymoyer, party parliamentarian, then suggested that the committee members could work it out after the meeting.

When D'Angelo and Frymoyer left the meeting, the rest of the committee stayed on, presumably to "cast their stones" for Sunday's election.

D'Angelo told the committee of one factor which may prevent another "attempt." He said anyone voting Sunday would have to register, and having registered for a second time, these people would be ineligible to return to Lion party membership.

However, this is only a supposition, since it has not officially been determined yet whether a student can resign from one party and register in another.

International Code Class Scheduled for Tonight

International code classes will begin at 7 tonight in 219 Electrical Engineering and will meet from 7 p.m. to 8 p.m. every Monday and Thursday.

At the end of the course FCC amateur radio, novice and technical examinations will be given. The classes are open to the public.

Role of HEc Named Theme For Program

The role of home economics in the University will be the theme of the 1958 College of Home Economics Spring Weekend.

The weekend program, to be held April 18 and 19, will feature displays, speakers and discussions centering around the way home economics fits into the University.

Three members of the Home Economics Student Council have been appointed chairmen of the council's committees for the weekend.

They are Eleanor Judy, junior in home economics from Cochranville, program committee; James Knipe, sophomore in hotel administration from Bala Cynwyd, display committee; and Leslie Shultz, senior in home economics from State College, publicity committee.

Ann Beveridge, junior in home economics from Pittsburgh, was named chairman of the Home Economics-Freshman-Faculty Mixer, March 16.
