Dulles Hand Seen In Tunisian Crises

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14 (AP)—Secretary of State Dulles disclosed today he may take personal command of an American drive to settle the Tunisia-French bomb dispute.

Dulles was also considering flying to New York Tuesday to join in a United Nations Security Council debate on Tunisia's charge that France committed "an act of aggression."

Dulles' sudden change in plans reflected mounting American fear that new violence might break out in Tunisia if peacemaking steps are delayed. The fear was that armed clashes might erupt if France pushed ahead with plans to send food and supplies to 15,000 French troops now "blockaded" by excitable Tunisians.

The State Department reported Dulles has been closely following Tunisian-French developments from his Atlantic City vacation spot. Dulles flew to the New Jersey resort Tuesday, hoping to spend 10 days resting.

Senate Republican Leader Knowland (Calif.) meanwhile called for "real statesmanship" by French leaders to ease the Mediterranean crisis.

Knowland suggested a three-point peace plan: use of UN patrols to guard the Tunisian-Algerian border, mediation by the United States or some other acceptable nation and placing the French-held Tunisian naval base of Bizerte under Atlantic Pact control.

Knowland, stressing he was speaking for himself, denounced as "a serious blunder" the French air attack on the Tunisian frontier town of Sakiet Sidi Youssef Saturday which precipitated the newest diplomatic hassle.

Acting Secretary of State Christian Herter, who has been handling the Tunisian problem in Dulles' absence, was reported in frequent telephone contact with Dulles on possible new moves. Herter was also understood to be keeping President Eisenhower advised at the White House vacation headquarters at Thomasville, Ga.

'Mild' Weather Pleases Lion

The Nittany Lion romped down the trail to the Bellefonte diamond this morning clutching a ten pound sledge hammer.

Chuckling, he smashed an occasional bit of snowflake in a dainty pirouette. "Huzzah," he cried,

"today I shall vent my beastly inhibitions," and then with maniacal glee he beat a 1950 model car to smithereens on the diamond.

Crazy Lion? No, believe it or not he was attending a car-smashing spree sponsored by Bellefonte High School's La Belle staff as a fund raising stunt. Afterward the Lion purred a sheepish "hello" to professor Snarf, strolling to class in the mild 25 to 30 degree temperature predicted for today.

New Code Faces Test Tomorrow

The revised All-University Elections Code, scheduled to be put into effect for the first time tomorrow night when University Party elects officers, can definitely be enforced, according to committee chairman Peter Fishburn.

He said yesterday, "There's not much doubt about it. We can and will enforce the code, including the revised section on party organization."

The section now states that any student who wishes to vote at a party meeting must hold a party membership card. The card is obtained when he registers as a member. He must present his permanent matriculation card in order to register.

After a student has joined one party, he may not change his political affiliation during the remainder of that semester, according to the revision.

The penalty for violating the revised section, Fishburn said, is banishment from all parties for the duration of the semester in which the violation occurred and for the following semester.

University party will meet at 7 p.m. tomorrow in 10 Sparks to elect party officers. John D'Angelo, acting party chairman, yesterday said he plans to run again for the office of party chairman.

In last Sunday's elections, which were declared null and void by the Elections Committee, D'Angelo defeated Arthur Pfautz by 14 votes for the party chairmanship. Pfautz has "voluntarily withdrawn from the contest" and will not run tomorrow night, according to William B. Crafts, assistant to the dean of men.

Pfautz' eligibility as a candidate was questioned last week because he is a residence halls counselor. Crafts said in the future it will be considered "inappropriate" for a counselor to seek a political post.

Campus party's steering committee will meet at 2 p.m. tomorrow in the Hetzel Union.

Lion, and Blue and White parties will not meet this weekend.
