

350 Receive Cards In University Party

This statement referred to the Elections Code revision which is to be tested at All-University Cabinet meeting Thursday: that registration in a party is binding for a whole semester.

The victor, D'Angelo, said after the meeting:

"Although there seemed to be two sides at Sunday night's meeting, I feel that our differences have been dissolved and we stand as one united University party."

"The University party is well on the path to victory in the Spring elections."

Johnson, the previously unfiliated nominee who lost to D'Angelo, said after the meeting:

"I will stay and work for the University party. I ran for office tonight because I thought this party could make up for the inadequacies of the other two parties. I have followed the organization of University party with much interest."

"I think the voting was representative of the majority and I would like to wish Mr. D'Angelo all the luck and success in the future."

The party class officers elected were as follows (* denotes unopposed candidate):
