

Editorial Opinion

A Moral Discriminator?

The Women's Student Government Association is searching for a means of granting additional privileges to women who have signed the Honor Code.

Suzanne Smith, president of WSGA said in November that the Honor Code, which now has about 90 signees, would be the first step toward a future revision of WSGA regulations.

At that time nothing definite was decided about what the additional privileges would be. Last week the matter was tossed around by WSGA but the only specific recommendation made was that Honor Code women need not sign in and out over weekends.

So WSGA referred the problem to a committee for new ideas. The best and most reasonable idea that the committee could produce, we believe, is to forget about giving the additional privileges.

The only possibility of additional "responsibility" would be an extension of hours or special permissions. As we have said before, granting them would be a serious error.

By giving extra privileges to those who sign the code, WSGA would be acting as a moral censor. It would discriminate between those signing the code and those not, and this is only a matter of moral judgment.

Miss Smith said that the Honor Code will lead to a future revision of WSGA regulations. In all probability this would mean extended hours for all women, but it seems that WSGA is waiting for a substantial number of students to declare their honor before a major change would come about.

In all fairness WSGA should neither reward nor discriminate Honor Code signees with additional privileges. If WSGA really wants to revise regulations in favor of more freedom, it should do so now regardless of the success or failure of the Honor Code.

Second-Rate Candidates?

Mayor Richardson Dilworth of Philadelphia, probably the best man in the Democratic party for the governorship of Pennsylvania, has decided not to run. This is unfortunate.

With Dilworth on the Democratic slate, the election promised to be a good one. The Republicans would have been forced to put up their best man. Pennsylvania could only profit by this.

Now it appears the Democrats are split. The Republicans have been split. And both parties appear likely to put up compromise candidates.

So with Pennsylvania in dire need of outstanding leadership, Pennsylvanians may well be choosing between two second-rate candidates this fall.

Editorials are written by the editors and staff members of The Daily Collegian and do not necessarily represent the views of the University or of the student body.

A Student-Operated Newspaper

The Daily Collegian

Successor to The Free Lance, est 1887

Published Tuesday through Saturday morning during the University year. The Daily Collegian is a student-operated newspaper. Entered as second-class matter July 8, 1934 at the State College Pa. Post Office under the act of March 3, 1879.

ED DUBBS Editor STEVE HIGGINS, Bus Mgr.

Managing Editor, Jody Harkness; City Editor, Robert Franklin; Sports Editor, Vince Caracci; Copy Editor, Marian Beatty; Assistant Copy Editor, Ralph Manna; Assistant Sports Editor, Matt Matthews and Lou Pratz; Make-up Editor, Ginny Phillips; Photograph Editor, George Harrison.

STAFF THIS ISSUE: Night Editor, Lynn Ward; Copy Editor, Dick Drayne; Wire Editor, Bonnie Jones; Assistants, Linda Segar, Beverly Yurick, Helen McCafferty, Marlene Milani, Judi Wharton, Carmella LaSpada, Lynnette Sabra, Janet Durstine, Don Casciato, Neal Friedman.

Interpretation

Nasty Flareup Seen Possible In Middle East

By WILLIAM L. RYAN AP Foreign News Analyst

Behind the new flare-up between Egypt and the Sudan lie the ambitions of Gamal Abdel Nasser and a natural Egyptian-Sudanese rivalry which could build up to a new and nasty situation for the plagued Middle East.

In Nasser's attempt to enforce Cairo's sovereignty over a 6000-square-mile area of Sudan there is a suggestion of new political pressure against the government at Khartoum, which is pro-Western in its policies and which distrusts Egypt and nations of Arab socialism.

But at the same time, inside Sudan there is a large body of sentiment which goes along with the slogans and aspirations of the sort of pan-Arab nationalism preached by President Nasser. A sudden sharp clash between these two rival groups could bring woe for the government of Premier Abdullah Khalil in Khartoum.

Egypt has had designs on Sudan which had been ruled as a British-Egyptian condominium, became an independent republic at the end of 1955, and it was a land with a bright future. About 3 1/2 times the size of Texas, this huge, hot land occupies a strategic position in the heart of East Africa.

Unlike Egypt, the Sudan is potentially wealthy, and the Sudanese are a sturdier breed than the Egyptians, besides being generally healthier. In the north they are of Arab stock and of the Moslem faith.

Many feel the pull of pan-Arab nationalism. But there is a good deal of distrust of Egyptian intentions, particularly among the dominant Umma party headed by Premier Khalil.

The Umma group does not like the pressure from the extremists of the "anti-imperialist front" which includes a couple of wings of the small Communist party in (Continued on page five)

Gazette

- TODAY American Institute of Industrial Engineers and American Foundryman's Society joint meeting, 7 p.m., 110 EE Academic Year Institute for High School Teachers of Science, film "Principle of Maximum and Minimum," 3:10 p.m. HUB Assembly Room Chess Club, 7 p.m., 7 Sparks Collegian Ad Staff, 6:45 p.m., 2 Carnegie Collegian Promotion Staff, 6:30 p.m., 209 Willard "Getting Acquainted with Our New Baby," first of six baby care meetings, 7:30 p.m., 120 State College Junior High Hillel Beginner's Hebrew, 7 p.m., Foundation Hillel Governing Board, 7 p.m., Foundation Newman Club, Ashes distributed, 6:30 a.m., 8 a.m., 4 p.m., 7 p.m. Church Newman Club Choir Practice, 7:30 p.m., Church Nittany Grotto, 7:30 p.m., 109 Armsby Spring Week Publicity meeting, 7:45 p.m., 213 HUB Reserve Officers Association, Centre County chapter, address by Dr. Allan L. Rodgers, associate professor of geography, 5:30 p.m., HUB Dining Room "A" Riding Club, 7 p.m., 217 Willard Economics Seminar, noon, HUB dining room "A" American Chemical Society, 7:30 p.m., 111 Bot.cke WSGA House, 12:30 p.m., 107 Boucke UNIVERSITY HOSPITAL Ronald Board, Alan Cohen, Lynda Colclaser, Jack Crosby, William De Harde, Sarah Finch, Donald Fowler, Thomas Fullen, Richard Goldberg, Alice Hunsberger, Joseph Kessinger, Warren Kraft, Bennett Levin, Fred Lorenz, Anne Lyter, Louis Paulick, Clare Ross, Elaine Schochet, John Smith, Robert Szyller, Heinz Weiser.

Interviews

- Dixie Cup (Div of American Can Co): Mar 4; DSci, Chem, Phys. Dew Chemical Co: Mar 4-5; Ag-BioChem, Chem, ChE, PT, EngSci, Math, ME, Metal, PNG, Phys, BusAdm, LA. Electro-Met Co (Div of U.C.C.): Mar 4-5; B.S., M.S.; ChE, CE, Metal, EE, ME. RCA Labs: Mar 4-5; B.S., M.S.; EE, Phys, ME; PhD candidates in EE, Math; also Sr. for summer. Reliance Electric: Mar 4; B.S., M.S.; IE, ME, EE, Phys; also Jr for summer. Sears, Roebuck & Co: Mar 4-5; any interested student. S. Morgan Smith: Mar 4; ME, CE. Youngstown Sheet & Tube: Mar 5; ME, EE, Metal, ChE, IE, MNG E; BusAdm and LA veterans. Metropolitan Edison Co: Mar 5; EE, ME, HEZ. Leigh Portland Cement Co: Mar 5; Bus Adm, LA, Sales. Mead Corporation: Mar 5; B.S.; ChE, IE, Accts; M.S. in ChE, ME, Phys; PhD in Chem. McGraw-Hill Publishing Co (Edit & Tech. Writing): Mar 5; AeroE, Econ, Math, Sci, ChE, Chem, CE, EE, EngSci, IE, Journ (News Edit), ME, Metal, MngE, Png, Phys, SanE.

CAMP INTERVIEWS Camp Swatona, Feb. 22; Camp Quinbeck, Feb. 24; Camp Menatoma, Feb 25 and Mar. 1.

Little Man on Campus by Dick Bibler

From Here

Another Senior Ends Silence

By Ed Dubbs

(Note: Ed Dubbs, inspired after reading a review copy of "The Unsilent Generation" (Rinehart, $2.95 in paperback), an anonymous symposium of 11 college senior's views on themselves and their world, sat down at his typewriter and pounded out this article to become the 12th senior and the 1st without anonymity.)

When, on my 14th birthday, my father dropped me off at a cheap boarding house where I was to live for four years, he took leave of me with these final words: "You are a slob and a son of a slob, and don't you ever forget that."

How could I ever forget that? I didn't like being called a son of a slob. But I recall I felt that was better than being called something else.

That is the way I felt about such things. I used to look at the bright side of everything. I guess I still do somewhat. Honestly, that is the way I felt. I'm being honest with you, believe me.

I was glad to leave home, if you could call it that. My early life wasn't very happy. You see, we lived like slobs.

Now don't misunderstand me. I'm misunderstood enough. So is my generation, the generation now leaving college. I mean I love my father, even though he is a slob. He's still my father.

I guess, though, I'm no longer his son. I am no longer a slob. Thanks to Princeton. I am a gentleman. I owe so much to Princeton. It has bettered me.

I also owe a lot to my early days of hardship. It taught me that this is a dog-eat-dog life. And (if you'll excuse an old cliché) this is one dog who's going to get the first bite.

Where does marriage fit into my life and this dog-eat-dog world? I believe people should marry for equal advantage. I want a wife who will be a lady. She must be willing to be the gentleman's lady and help me advance in this dog-eat-dog world.

One thing is going to hold me down in this world. Deep down inside of me I am a coward. And this I must still overcome if I am to get ahead in this dog-eat-dog world. You must be willing to gamble—to take chances—if you are to make a name for yourself.

And I want to get ahead. Being a gentleman isn't enough. Being an "Ivy Leaguer" isn't enough. I want fame and fortune.

I want people to say: "There is a son of a slob who really made good."

Seriously, "The Unsilent Generation" is quite enjoyable reading. The book, edited by Otto Butz, is a short 189 pages.

It's about our generation, the generation now leaving college. The college students, thanks to anonymity, write frankly on what they think of happiness, success, security, God, education, marriage, family, and their own generation.

The book was released Monday timed with a preview in the latest issue of Life magazine.

