

Senators Will Decide Elections Violations, Finance Heard PhiKPsi Probation

The recommendation for social probation for Phi Kappa Psi fraternity for mistreatment of pledges will go before the Senate Subcommittee on Discipline today.

The committee will rule on a recommendation by the Interfraternity Council Board of Control for social probation until June, permanent removal from office of the house president and vice president and a $150 fine.

A Phi Kappa Psi officer said last night the fraternity will not appeal the recommendation but that members of the house will attend the meeting to offer any needed information.

The Senate subcommittee may accept or amend the recommendation.

The fraternity is charged with using practices "detrimental to the physical health" of pledges and "offensive to the basic principles of human dignity."

George Wills, chairman of the IFC board, said the house was also judged for conducting pre-initiation practices outside the house and for failure to abide by the pre-initiation code.

As part of their "Work Week" pledges were sent on "missions" to Boalsburg and the surrounding area, Wills said.

Wills said the recommendation was based entirely on testimony of the fraternity members.

Wills said Thomas Brown, house president, admitted it was his duty to be familiar with the IFC regulations, but said he was not aware of the pre-initiation practices code.

The code was adopted in March 1956, Wills said, and "has been distributed to all chapter houses by the IFC and it also appears in the IFC rushing brochure."

Wills said that this case should be a reminder to all houses to carefully look over their "Work Week" practices. He said chapter officers should re-evaluate their entire pledge program, especially the pre-initiation week.

ADS to Hear Journ Grads

Three graduates of the department of advertising of the School of Journalism will speak Sunday to members of Alpha Delta Sigma, professional advertising fraternity, on the advertising world as they have experienced it since their graduation last June.

Kim Rotzoll, William Gibbs and Donald Shaw will speak to the fraternity at 7:30 p.m. at the Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity.

Edmund Stashak, June 1955 graduate and past president of the fraternity, may also attend. He is now assistant advertising manager of a Harrisburg department store.

All-University Elections Committee Wednesday night heard two subcommittee reports on penalties for violating the Elections Code and on party finances.

The report on penalties, given by the subcommittee chairman, Ruby Seaman, proposed disqualification of candidates or an entire party as the penalty for major violations. If this were to be put into effect, the old system of vote docking would be thrown out "for good."

The report on the parties' financial system was given by Fred Taylor, subcommittee chairman. He recommended that Elections Committee regulate how much is spent by parties and that it authorize campaign expenditures.

No action was taken on the reports. Chairman Peter Fishburn told the committee he would organize the material and suggestions from the committee into specific recommendations and present them to the committee for approval at one of its next meetings. Elections Committee recommendations do not officially go into effect until approved by All-University Cabinet.

Fishburn told the committee that the Elections Code is now without a penalties clause. The one on vote docking, he said, was inserted as a temporary measure for the fall elections, and it no longer applies.

"Major violations by an entire party would be penalized by disqualification. A major violation by an individual candidate would result in his disqualification from the election."

"Depending on the severity of the offense, the penalty for this type of violation may also include disqualification from participation in any University activity for a period of one semester following the end of the semester in which the offense has taken place."

The report said, "Disqualification of candidates is a serious and constant threat to violators of the Election Code. It is a quick, efficient and effective penal system, without the operational fallacies of the vote docking system."

A sliding scale of fines was proposed as the penalty for minor code violations. It was

Winters Writes Series On Sand Conditioning

Wesley P. Winters, assistant professor of industrial engineering, is preparing a series of articles on practical sand conditioning for "Sand Conditioning Topics," a magazine published by the Royer Foundry and Machine Co., Kingston.

The series will represent a refresher course in foundry sand for the practicing foundryman and an introductory course for the uninitiated.

suggested that non-payment of the fines be penalized by disqualification of the candidate or the entire party.

Fishburn praised the report on penalization as "something we've been looking for for a long time."

Taylor's report asked that Elections Committee set up a five-member subcommittee on clique finances. This group would pass on the amounts spent by the parties, would take over the ordering of campaign material and would set a ceiling price on each item.

Finn Paper Prints Forster's Article

Helsingin Sanomat, Finland's leading newspaper, in its Dec. 6 issue commemorating the 40th anniversary of Finnish independence, published a feature article by Dr. Kent Forster, professor of European history at the University and Fulbright lecturer at the University of Helsinki from 1956 to 1958.

The article was an analysis from the non-Finnish point of view of the growth and functioning of Finland's democracy.
