Marriage is Topic Of Prof's Speech

"As the world moves into the 'space age' the situation in which families live is changing and relationships become more and more important," according to Dr. William Smith Jr., professor of family relationships.

Speaking yesterday at a convocation at Mary Washington College of the University of Virginia at Fredericksburg on "Marriage in Time and Space," Dr. Smith told the students that "young people today can learn ways to become more competent in their relationships."

Coed Has Safety Pin Safely Pulled

Kathryn Stauffer, junior in education from Bala-Cynwyd, is reported in "good condition" after having an open safety pin removed from her throat early yesterday morning.

The pin was removed at the Geisinger Memorial Hospital in Danville, after Miss Stauffer was rushed there in a 2-hour ambulance trip. The object was removed from her esophagus by Dr. Maloney, a visiting doctor at the hospital.

Dr. Alfred H. Griess, physician at the Health Center, said removing the pin did not require an operation, but merely the use of a special instrument designed for such purposes.

Miss Stauffer reportedly swallowed the pin in a fit of coughing as she held it in her mouth. A sorority sister, Maud Gay Mack, sophomore in education from Camp Hill, called the ambulance about 8:30 p.m. Thursday.

After X-rays were taken and read, Griess sent Miss Stauffer to the Danville hospital. Miss Stauffer is expected to return to campus this afternoon.

The Geisinger Hospital is the same institution where Larry Sharp was taken in the University city ambulance after he broke his neck on a Recreation Hall trampoline Oct. 11.
