

Trustee Hits Loss Of 'Fun in Living'

By MARIE RUSSO

Students are losing fun in living for the sake of humdrum security of a job with a "steady" income, according to Miss Mary Jane Wyland, a trustee of the University.

Miss Wyland spoke to a capacity audience at the Women's Student Government Association convocation Monday night in the Hetzel Union auditorium.

Miss Wyland said there is a "bigger thing" that can come from finding a "sense of values in the things we are doing."

"We need to get more fun out of living by taking a calculated risk," she said.

College women must discover the "self development that we provide for ourselves," she said.

The college graduate should have something inside which comes from an integrated sense of values that directs her "beliefs and stands on topics."

The college woman should have a sense of tolerance and world consciousness, she said.

"We are only part of a great group of people and should be aware of what is going on," according to Miss Wyland.

An educated person is socially acceptable in a community anywhere. She can converse amicably with people of all backgrounds and can stand for what she believes without causing any ill feeling.

A person who does not recognize spiritual values and relationships is missing something drastic from her life.
