

LaX Goalie Set for Tough Season Lion Golfing Queen—

(This is the third in a series of articles reviewing the lacrosse team. Today we review the defense.)

The last penetrable object in lacrosse, like hockey, is the goalie. And the man in front of Penn State's nets will have to take more than his usual share of the burden this year.

The most likely candidate to stop the flying white ball of rubber is a veteran of both the lacrosse wars and the military, Burt Houseworth. The former Long Island star goalie hasn't been inside the nets for five years, and in the opening game of his "comeback," April 7 at Hofstra, he will oppose a team that hasn't lost any outstanding players from the '57 unit.

Added to Houseworth's handicap is the loss of the Lion's record-holding attackman, Bill Hess. Hess broke a pair of ribs in another sport and will not play in the first few games.

That makes a comment by veteran defenseman Mike Beattie all the more appropriate. Beattie prophesied, "Houseworth will just about have to hold the opponent's scoreless if we are going to win any games... until Hess returns. It's going to be a make-or-break season according to what goes on in our own nets."

Houseworth also has another reputation to live up to. The junior is succeeding one of Penn State's best goalies, Jim Houck. Houck, who graduated last year, established a Penn State and Eastern career record of 278 saves.

As with last year, coach Earnie Baer's second man in the nets will be Dave Wilkinson. The aggressive junior has been handicapped by inexperience and the misfortune of playing behind two of the best goalies that the Lions have had in their 45-year history.

Beattie and Ray Tuleya are the only two lettermen Baer has for the three defense posts. Beattie, incidentally, has made the switch back to his old high school position after playing the much more demanding mid-field post last year.

Gridder Dave Kasperian went out for lacrosse "just for the conditioning," but according to Baer, he has turned into a top-notch defenseman and is vying for the third spot. Gove Elder, Dick Dill and Alan Thomas are also at the top of the list.

cided to transfer to Penn State where her grandfather, Bob Sr., had coached the Penn State golf team from 1922 to 1949. After her grandfather retired, her uncle Bob took over and was at the Lion coaching helm for seven years.

However, the 35-year era ended for the Rutherfords last year when Bob Jr. resigned his coaching post to devote full time to his duties as superintendent on the golf course and ice rink.

The Rutherfords produced some of the finest collegiate golf teams in the nation. A look at their all-time golf record shows this—153 wins, 57 defeats, and six ties.

Ann, who is a senior at the University, has participated in 50 golf tournaments. Among these were the Women's National Intercollegiate Golf in which she was co-medalist in the qualifying round and the Harrisburg District Golf Tournament in which she copped first place.

In addition, she was a semi-finalist in the Pennsylvania State Amateur Golf Championship and runner-up in the Broadmoor Invitation Tournament. She also qualified in the nation's top two amateur golf tournaments—Western Amateur and N.S. Amateur and National Amateur.

Last year, Ann was honored to be the first Penn State coed sent to participate in the National Women's Intercollegiate Golf Tournament.

Her best competitive golf score, 75, was tallied last year at the Harrisburg Colonial Country Club when she set a course record.

If you answered "No" to all questions, you obviously smoke Camels—a real cigarette. Only 6 or 7 "No" answers mean you better get on to Camels fast. Fewer than 6 "No's" and it really doesn't matter what you smoke. Anything's good enough!

But if you want to enjoy smoking as never before, switch to Camels. Nothing else tastes so rich, smokes so mild. Today more people smoke Camels than any other cigarette. The best tobacco gives you the best smoke. Try Camels and you'll agree!
