FOR A BETTER PENN STATE

God's Little Acre, Pa.

Tuesday, March 15, 1958

Campus Leaders nder Poison Pen

The so called "Humor Magazine" on campus has finally provided the students with something worthwhile—a much needed lampooning of Penn State.

Foregoing the usual format of stale jokesand pilfered cartoons, this issue dwells on such popular campus topics of discussion as the debate over compulsory or voluntary employment; are love trysts in the water tower feasible; what would happen if the Daily Col-Schilpp, WDFM Station Manager; legian were printed on soft absorbent paper; and just who is going to move Beaver Field. Wrestler Johnny Johnston; and Scouring the campus for prolific poison-pen pushers, riomy uncovered, amidst discarded Campus Party campaign posters in the Obelisk, four or most five dandies. Probably the most celebrated of these yellow journalists is Clark Kent, prize winning reporter of the Metropolis Planet. Another gem whose writing appears in this issue is Sam Neubbish, recently returned from the far flung portals of Hoyt Hall. As if this were not enough, and at considerable expense to the editors, the talents of such outstanding by-liners as Moe Schragg, Fidel Castro, and Viva Zapata, female correspondent for the Daily Home Ec'er, have been editors of Froth by Virginia O' employed.

The satirical drawing pen of local haberdasher Charlie Levine the question of Santa Claus' real1:07:15 A.M.? true perspective to a world of ity, the editors of Froth have supmulti-splendored things.

Ed Dubbs Taken Over The Coals

In a really effective take-off on the Mike Wallace interview, Froth Editor Ron Cassarella takes a candid look into the inner workings of Collegian Editor Ed Dubbs.

With such loaded questions as: "Why did you turn down a bid to Lions Paw?"; "Do you feel semester elementary education lowly student. We are sure you He forgot Cabinet serves any valid func-major from Danboro has been too will feel this enlightenment. The Word. tion?" and, "Do you feel you are chosen Froth Girl of the Month. disliked by the administration?", Photographer George Harrison Casarella probes for the real reasons behind this year's sudden up- any of which would make a camheaval of tradition by Collegian era shudder. The high point of

And, just as loaded as the questions are Dubbs' replies. "Lions Paw need the Editor of Collegian more than the Editor . . . needs Lions Paw", and ". . . nothing people say about me nortical and the continuous people say ab people say about me particularly bothers me" are mere samples of Cartoonists the comebacks of the Collegian

"The Sigma Pi's stole the Beta's bathtub last month!"

"Have they taken it back?"
"No, nobody's missed it yet."

Mama, Mama! The puppies are Have you seen them?

No, but the dog is empty!

Girl on phone to wolfish date: "Hello tall, dark and hands."

system.

This is the question put to the Hooligan, Penn State coed. Just as the letter to a newspaper editor plied the reader with an answer,

Although you probably have your own answer to this query, Froth has come up with a dandy!

Photographer George Harrison in its all-out campaign for better the entire layout is a full-page student government.

Make Debut

Five make their publication debut in this month's Froth. Ranging in standing from freshmen to graduate students, these cartoonists combine to give the reader of Froth four pages of fresh cartooning fun.

The new doodlers are: Art Einsyein, grad student in advertising; Francis Zettler, freshman from Wilkes-Barre; Sandy Green, second semester applied art matrack of their figures. In fact, they jor; Bill Crist, fifth semester arts were inventors of the loose-leaf and letters major; and Dick Christian, sixth semester BA major.

scrounging, ace Froth reporter nemons," a few acknowledge the Clark Kent has come up with the all-important minutes to the All-University Cabinet meeting on that world-shattering question: Should Cabinet pass a motion to

From the opening remarks of He read the text, All-University President Bob Steele, the narration carries He studied his notes, through to the final decision. He summarized his outline, Great insight into student representation is garnered from the He outlines his summary on 3x5 nings since the beginning of the spring semester are found in this comments of such highly-regarded campus leaders as Home Ec President Pat Moran, Senior Class President Tom Hollander, Dean of He boiled the card down to a Men Frank J. Simes, All-University Secretary Joe Boehret, IFC President Jim Hart, and Engineer-The sentence down to a phrase, ing and Architecture Student The phrase down to a word, Council President Robert Stroup. He entered the exam,

It is indeed very enlightening to share with these guiding lights He analyzed the question, of student government in their And then Lovely Lynn Kinnier, eighth deep-seated thoughtfulness of the

The Bully & Collegian Jablonski, Nurock, Morgan Gain

Each year, Froth combines with the Editor of the Daily Collegian to pick a half-dozen campus celebrities whom they feel merit awards for their various efforts.

This year the list of Lemon-winners include Liberal Arts Council President Bob Nurock; Lorraine Jablonski, Leonides President; Suzanne Smith, Women's Student Government Association President; Dick Association of Independent Men President, John Morgan.

The few words that make up these awards fall short of telling the whole story-those people have been given this recognition because they are far and above the many other student leaders in deserving these citations. And, al-After many tedious hours of though some awards are truly good done by these individuals.

cards,

He reduced the cards to one card, sentence,

Latest

A complete listing of the pinmonth's Froth.

Some of the newly-pinned couples on campus who you may have some acquaintance with are: Phi Delt's Tom Hancock and Jean Grosh; Bill Head, Sigma Chi, and Pearl Bailey; Lambda Chi's Jim Brown and Connie Jones, Alpha Xi Delta; and Marty Scherr and Lianne Cordero, Kappa Alpha Theta.

Also included in the listings are engagements and marriages. Did you know Jake Engle, Delta Chi, and Doreen Hayward, Delta Gamma, are engaged? How about Bar-bara Schweiker and Ralph Cissone . . . they're married y'know.

tomorrow!

only a quarter . . . just as much as Confidential