Another Aiken Star

Tennis Comes Easy HR's Club To University Coed Pirates, 6.

That time-worn cliche, "Anyone for tennis?" is likely to produce an emphatic "you bet" from tennis star Sue

Miss Aiken has been swinging a racket since she was shorter than the net. Her brother, Bill, who was co-captain of Penn State's tennis team in 1951, showed Sue her first strokes-and she hasn't been far from the net ever

It is said "competition is the blood of sports" and no doubt tennis runs in the blood of the Aiken family of the tennis-playing community of Edgewood, Pa. To produce three star netters Bill, 26, Sue 21, Pat 18, in one family is quite a feat.

In 1954, Sue was voted the Sportsmanship Award by the Pittsburgh Tennis Association.

Pittsburgh Tennis Association.

She has been playing competitively for eight years. In those years, Miss Aiken was co-captain of the Pittsburgh Women's Tennis League; won several Edgewood Invitation Tournaments; played on the Middle States Team, Pittsburgh Whitman Cup Team, and participated in the Junior Nationals in Philadelphia. nis Championships.

At Edgewood High, in addition to her tennis prowess, Sue also managed to find time to play on the girls' softball, basketball and volleyball teams.

Sue, an eightn semester home economics major, is a very active coed at Penn State. Her activities include being past junior senator of W.S.G.A. She is now secretary of this organization. She also has been a member of the Home Economics Student Council, Cwens, LaVie, Kappa Kappa Gamma so-rority, and Phi Upsilon Pi.

Tennis playing and attending Penn State are definitely two family habits of the Aikens. Sue's dad, 'Ted' Aiken, graduated from the University in 1921 and is quite active in the Penn State Alumni Associhews, belting homers by the pair, hit Numbers three and four yesterday as the Milwaukee Braves whipped the Pittsburgh Pirates 6-1 in County Stadium. The slug-ging third baseman also homered twice on Tuesday when the Pirates spoiled the Braves' opener.

2 Mathews Pirates, 6-1

World Series hero Lew Bur-dette checked the Pirates, al-though after five innings Pittsburgh scored a run—something the New York Yankees couldn't do in their last 24 innings against him last fall.

Milwaukee scored its first run in the third, when Burdette sin-gled home Johnny Logan, who had doubled to open the inning and advanced on Del Crandall's single. Pittsburgh pulled even in the fifth when Roberto Clemente tripled and scored a moment later on a sacrifice fly to Gene Baker.

The Braves' fifth inning out-burst came after starter and loser Vern Law had the first two bat-ters out. Red Schoendienst singled, Bob Hazle walked and Mathews lifted his third homer into the right field bleachers.

In the seventh, Mathews teed off again—this time on rookie right-hander Bennie Daniels, who relieved Law in the sixth—and Schoendienst, who again had sin-

Meet the men of atomic-electric power

These are two of the new "atomic men" in the business of producing electricity. In the illustration, they are studying a small-scale model of an atomic reactor designed for an atomic-electric power plant.

They, and hundreds of other electric company men, are learning how to harness the power of atomic energy to the job of producing electricity. With scientists and engineers of the Atomic Energy Commission, equipment makers and builders, they are helping develop the new tools, new machinery and new kinds of buildings needed for atomicpowered electric plants.

The nation's appetite for electric power is growing rapidly, and atomic energy promises a vast new source of fuel to make more electricity. That's why independent electric companies like this one are studying, testing and comparing methods and equipment to find the best ways to put the atom to work for America.
