

Racial Crisis Stories Win Pulitzer Prize

NEW YORK (AP) — Coverage of the explosive integration crisis at Little Rock's Central High School won three separate 1958 Pulitzer Prizes in journalism yesterday.

They went to the Little Rock Arkansas Gazette for meritorious public service; the newspaper's executive editor, Harry S. Ashmore, for editorial writing; and Associated Press correspondent Relman (Pat) Morin for his eyewitness account of mob violence outside the school Sept. 23.

Morin, a Pulitzer Prize winner in 1951, was one of two winners this year for national reporting. The other was Clark Mollenhoff of the Des Moines Register and Tribune, who was cited for his investigation of labor racketeering.

The 1958 fiction award went to James Agee's novel, "A Death in the Family." It deals with a Southern family's reaction to the death of a beloved father.

The annual drama award went to "Look Homeward, Angel," Ketti Frings' adaptation of the late Thomas Wolfe's autobiographical novel of the same name.

GM Asks Wage Study

DETROIT (AP)—General Motors Corp. has appealed directly to its 350,000 hourly rate employees to study "in the light of conditions today" the company's wage formula which was rejected by the United Auto Workers Union. The company yesterday made public a letter from President Harlow H. Curtrice to all employees covered by the GM-UAW.

State Needs $8 Million

HARRISBURG (AP)—Commerce Secretary William Davlin said yesterday the Legislature will have to appropriate eight million dollars to continue the commonwealth's industrial development program for another four years. At the same time, he said more money is needed to open regional offices in north-central and south-eastern Pennsylvania.

Lewis Tells of Red Threat

CINCINNATI (AP) — John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers Union, told the American Mining Congress yesterday that "the Russian Communists must not be permitted to impair or strike down our American economy or imperil the liberties of its free system."
