

Companies Interview Despite Recession

The number of companies interviewing seniors this year is not down as much as the recession seemed to indicate it would be, according to Donald M. Cook, assistant director of the University Placement Service. Approximately 365 companies from all areas held interviews on campus.

In comparison with other years the number of recruiters for non-technical students has been higher this semester than ever before and there has been a particular increase in the number of retailing and insurance companies, Cook said.

Total needs, however, he said, are down probably as much as 25 per cent from last year. Cook noted, however, that some companies have been notified that not enough students had signed up for an interview with them. The placement service has a policy of notifying companies who expect to be interviewing on campus when six or less students sign up for an interview.

Companies this year have been a little more selective, Cook said. They are placing more emphasis on academic standing and over-all abilities, there is more demand for the top students, and the students with low averages or a pending military obligation are having more trouble, he said.

The average salary, excluding education majors, is over last year's, but percentage-wise the increase is lower: last year the average salary was $422 and this year it is expected to be between $430 and $435, Cook said.

Cook said he feels the number of interviews per person will be down this year. He says the reason for this could be either that the students have eliminated themselves, or that they are being more selective.

Cook urged all graduating seniors without jobs to stop in at the placement service in Old Main because some jobs are still available. Many recruiters were not able to interview on campus and would like to have written applications.

"There are plenty of jobs, but students this year have to do more digging," Cook said. There will be more students without jobs at graduation, but if they will persist they should be able to find jobs by fall, he added.

Armed Forces Day Set for Thursday Anderson to Head Phil Department

Thursday has been proclaimed Armed Forces Day in State College by Burgess Roy D. Anthony. Anthony has asked borough residents to display the flag during the observance.

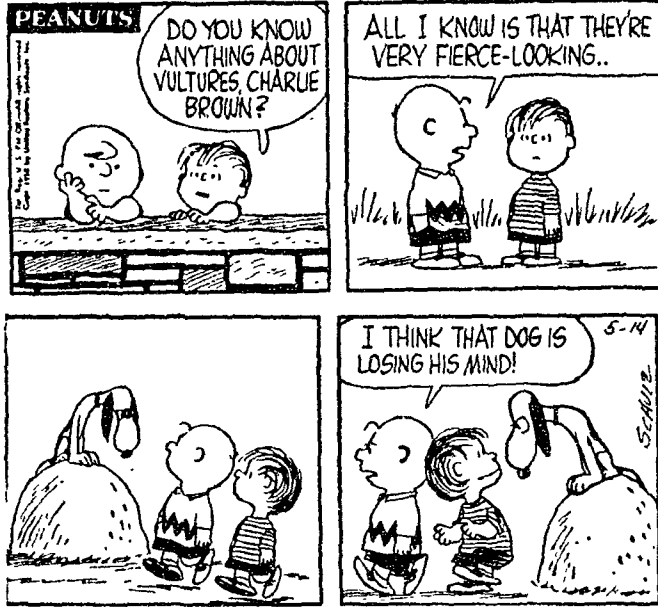

Exhibits by student organizations and Centre County industrial firms will be on display in the Hetzel Union Building. Student, veteran and civic organizations will participate in a parade Thursday.

Dr. John M. Anderson, professor of philosophy, will serve for a 3-year term, effective July 1, as head of the Department of Philosophy.

The appointment was approved at the weekend meeting of the Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees in accordance with a policy that provides for rotation in the position, with each head appointed for a 3-year term.

Eng Prof to Present Triaxial Stress Paper

Dr. L. W. Hu, associate professor of engineering mechanics, will present a paper entitled "Development of a Triaxial Stress Testing Machine and Triaxial Stress Experiments," at the spring meeting of the Society for Experimental Stress Analysis this month in Cleveland.
