'Nine' Trounces Colgate, 8-1

Riese Wins 5th; Stickler, Hoover Hit Circuit Blows

Ron Riese's masterful hurling performance and a lusty extra-base punch carried Penn State's baseball team to an easy 8-1 win over Colgate yesterday afternoon in the final home game of the season.

Riese, whose twirling of late has been better than that of his more highly-regarded teammate, Cal Emery, picked up his fifth win of the year against one loss as he scattered seven hits—four of which were infield blows.

He lost his shutout in the seventh when, with one man down, opposing pitcher Ron Greenleese slammed a home run into the runway underneath the football stands in deep centerfield.

Although he had men on base in five of the nine innings, Riese was very effective as he passed only two and fanned 12. And only once—outside of the home run—did he allow a Colgate man past second base.

Stickler and Hoover both smashed homers while Baidy had the three-bagger. Stickler's roundtripper in the eighth came with two men aboard and actually sent losing pitcher Greenleese to an early shower. Hoover hit a solo job in the third and Baidy rapped his triple with two men on in the seventh.

Penn State started its scoring in the first frame when Ron Rainey singled home Larry Fegley who had reached base on an error. Hoover's shot down the left field line made it 2-0, but the Lions couldn't come up with another scoring combination until the later innings.

However, it wasn't that they didn't have a chance to score, for they left 11 men on base over the first six frames. But the clutch hits weren't made until the seventh and eighth frames.

Baidy provided the first clutch blow with his triple in the seventh with Joe Moore and Dave Watkins on base. Moore had led off the inning with a walk and Watkins' sacrifice attempt had fouled up the Colgate defense, leaving both runners safe. Then Baidy was sent up to sacrifice, but after two vain bunting attempts he rifled a Greenleese throw to deep left center.

However the rally died when Gary Miller struck out and Riese's attempted bunt was turned into a double play catching Baidy at the plate.

But the Lions came right back in the eighth with four runs to put the game beyond recall. Larry Fegley led off with an infield hit and Hoover's sharp liner to right moved him to second. Rainey beat out a hard chop to the shortstop which scored Fegley when the ball skipped into left field. Then Stickler teed off on a 2-1 pitch to deep left center and that was the end for Mr. Greenleese.

Dick Hahn came on in relief and halted the Nittanies by sending the next three men down in order.

GOODBY STATE . . . might well be senior catcher Don Stickler's thankful comment as he crosses the plate after hitting a two-run homer in his last trip to the plate at Beaver Field. The State College native drove in Bob Hoover (5) and Ron Rainey (partly hidden) ahead of him. Senior Joe Moore (21) waits to congratulate Stickler.

BEAUTIFUL FORM . . . on a slide into home by Lion third-baseman Steve Baidy, but to no avail. The ball is there and waiting in the hands of Colgate catcher Chuck Halpen.

"Jockey brand underwear made me Phi Beta Kappa!"

"'Amazing scholarship', said the Dean. 'Cheating!' cried my fellow students. But I knew the real reason for my becoming an honor student. My tailored-to-fit Jockey brand briefs were so comfortable that naturally I found it easy to study better and get straight A's."

"'If your brand is Jockey, you won't need any ponies', I tell my friends. It's true, too. You see, Jockey—and only Jockey brand—uses thirteen separate pieces to provide a perfectly smooth fit. You feel better—and you study better—when you wear comfortable Jockey briefs."
