

Borough Serves Students' Needs

State College always has been, and probably always will be, a college town.

From a humble beginning as a crossroads when the University was the Farmer's High School, the borough of State College has grown into a modern community of some 14,000 persons.

Christ-Janer Heads Pratt Art School

Albert Christ-Janer, former director of the School of the Arts, has been named Dean of the Art School and professor of art at Pratt Institute, Brooklyn, N.Y.

A graduate of St. Olaf College, Christ-Janer holds the degree of master of fine arts from Yale University and received the doctor of fine arts degree from Lake Erie College. He also studied at Harvard University and the Art Institute of Chicago.

Since his appointment to the University in 1956, Mr. Christ-Janer has been particularly concerned with developing the art, music, and theatre arts curriculums and establishing direct contact between the University and performing and producing artists.

This summer he arranged for the world premieres of five short plays by Pulitzer Prize-winner William Inge, with music by Harriet Johnson, noted critic of the New York Post, at the newly-established Mateer Playhouse.

His paintings have been shown at the St. Louis City Museum, the Kansas City Art Institute, the Metropolitan Museum, and the Brooklyn Museum, among others. He is a member of the C. W. Kraushaar Gallery. He is author of four books, and the co-author of a fifth soon to be published.

At Pratt Institute, Christ-Janer is the fourth chief of the Art School, which was established in 1887, and the third to hold the title of Dean.

Former Counselor Named Coe's Dean

Thomas G. Williams, a residence hall counselor for two years, has been named dean of men at Coe College, Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

Williams was graduated from the University in 1956 with a bachelor of science degree. He received his master's degree in clinical psychology last January, and is now working toward a doctorate in the field of counseling in education.

Last year Williams was counselor-coordinator of the Nittany-Pollock residence hall area.

John Vogel Grant

The Eastern Pennsylvania Pest Control Association has contributed $252.05 to the department of zoology and entomology as its 1958 gift to the John Vogel Memorial Fund.

Exposition Animals Raised by Students

Every spring for the past 41 years the Little International Livestock Exposition has given University students a chance to learn how to raise fine show animals by actual experience.

Patterned after the famous Chicago International Exposition, the Little International is sponsored by the Penn State Block and Bridle Club and is open to everyone on campus.

About six weeks before the event, lots are drawn and participants are assigned a University animal to fit and train. The animals are kept in campus barns.

Contestants may enter four divisions—sheep, swine, beef cattle and horse—and are judged on how well they have groomed their animals and also how well they show them at the exposition.

Awards go to a champion and reserve champion fitter and showman in each of the four divisions. A grand champion showman and reserve grand champion are chosen for the whole event.

Men in the livestock field or educators from out-of-state universities are selected as judges.

At a banquet after the exposition, a Merit Trophy Award is given to an outstanding student in agriculture. A special citation award is also presented to some distinguished person in agriculture.

The Little International is one of the highlights of the College of Agriculture's annual shows. A fall horticulture show sponsored by the Horticulture Club during Homecoming Weekend and a spring dairy exposition are also big events.

The dairy exposition lasts a week and covers all phases of dairy education, including a dairy cattle judging contest similar to the Little International, and competitions in ice cream and milk judging, making ice cream molds and designing plans for dairy plants.

Construction--

The bakery of the new food stores building next to the golf course, is expected to be in operation this week with the remainder of the building to be finished soon.

Aberg Named To PI Office

Gilbert S. Aberg, writer-director in General Extension's Motion Picture Studio since 1955, has been added to the Department of Public Information staff as a specialist in radio and television.

James H. Coogan, director, said the newcomer would concern himself primarily with the writing and producing of educational-informational kinescopes for use on Pennsylvania television station screens. He also will help expand the University's participation in radio programming.

A graduate of the University of Wisconsin, Aberg for eight years was employed by commercial and educational film companies, Encyclopedia Britannica Films included, and came to the campus from his native city of Chicago.

Honor Societies--

The floriculture and horticulture honorary fraternity, Pi Alpha Xi, provides floral displays in the Hetzel Union Building throughout the year.

Pi Omega Pi is the undergraduate business honorary.

Juniors may be elected to Pi Sigma Alpha, the political science honorary. This group holds bi-weekly dinner meetings at which are present prominent speakers. An annual prize is given to an outstanding senior in political science.

Students are tapped from WD-FM and the Educational Television Project to join Rho Tau Sigma, the radio and television honorary.

Xi Sigma Pi, forestry honorary fraternity, is composed of students and faculty in the School of Forestry.

To paraphrase Napoleon, State College is a town of shopkeepers. There is no industry here. All of the inhabitants are either students, employees of the University or merchants.

State College is run on the borough manager system with Roy Edwards as borough manager. His is a non-political post and he is hired to run the borough rather than being elected. The Borough Council is the legislative branch of borough government.

The judicial branch is under Burgess Guy Mills. His justice of the peace court handles cases involving violations of borough ordinances as well as some civil suits.

The State College police force under Chief John R. Juba is responsible for the safety of borough inhabitants. Its jurisdiction extends only to the borough limits, which do not include the University campus.

Because of the geographical and economic ties between the town of State College and the University, the two work hand in hand in planning, most of the time.

Dr. Eric A. Walker, president of the University, is a member of the borough council, as are several faculty members. Present and potential enrollment of the University is of interest to borough officials so that they may plan for the future.

The borough has grown tremendously since the war and now has its own daily newspaper, The Centre Daily Times, which also serves the rest of Centre County, and also a radio station, WMAJ.

Much University history can be seen merely by looking at the street signs, since many of the major streets are named after former presidents of the University, such as Atherton, Burrows, Allen and Calder.

Due to an error by some bureaucrat, however, Dr. Frazier's name is misspelled for ternity as "Frazier" on one of the borough streets, the one which the State College Municipal Building and the Alpha Fire Company are located.

Kern Receives Honors From Pathology Society

Dr. Frank D. Kern, professor emeritus of botany and dean emeritus of the Graduate School, was honored at the 50th anniversary meetings of the American Phytopathological Society in Bloomington, Ind., last month.
