

Indie Encampment Asks Year-Round Activities

The need for student government and organized recreation for summer students was sounded during the first Independent Encampment Saturday at the Forestry Cabin in Stone Valley.

Recognizing the increasing summer school enrollment the 70 independent student leaders discussed the feasibility of year-round programs for these students.

BA Council Runs Events For Students

The 5-year-old Business Administration Student Council is the major student organization in the College of Business Administration.

Its purpose is to promote the Business Administration College on campus and to provide for matters pertaining to the welfare of students within the college.

Council members make recommendations on curriculums being offered in the college and cooperate with other councils in phases of campus activities through membership on the Inter-College Council Board.

An annual career day is the council's most important event. Its purpose is to enable students to explore the opportunities for employment in the major fields of commerce, industry, labor, trade and government.

The council's major project this semester will be the arrangement of a fall career day.

Council elections are held each fall for freshmen. Upper-class elections are held in the spring. Candidates are required to have an All-University average of 2.0.

In addition to the class representatives, the council is also made up of the presidents of the nine clubs in the college. These clubs are Insurance, Accounting, Society for the Advancement of Management, Marketing, BizAd Bulletin, Alpha Kappa Psi, Delta Sigma Pi, Phi Chi Theta and Delta Nu Alpha.

This year's council officers are James Meister, president; Alan Lipner, vice president; and Janet Ours, secretary-treasurer.

Harshbarger Prescribes New Outlook

The form and content of a freshman's religion must change in college just as must his other knowledge, the Rev. Luther H. Harshbarger, University chaplain, said Sunday at chapel services.

Preaching on "Of this time, of this place," Mr. Harshbarger said, "The new generation should not allow old forms to contain (its) thoughts."

A freshman's old faith will not hold through college, but will break down under the pressure of new thoughts, he said.

He called Christianity something that "comes to man at a definite place and time."

Time represents a break with the past, Mr. Harshbarger said, and to gain the status of their parents, young people often must do the opposite of their actions.

Mr. Harshbarger called the University a place which should "change the outlook from a local look at the cosmos to cosmic look at the world."

The work of an educated man, he said, is to look at facts as a whole, analyze them and do something about them.

"You must have confidence in the powers of your own creation," he told the congregation "Don't make decisions unless you can assume the responsibility for carrying them through."

New Building Names Honor Past Faculty

New students having trouble remembering names of the many campus buildings may be comforted by the fact that next year's freshmen will have even a harder time.

Adding to the woes of next year's class will be the names of the four new residence halls and the dining hall of North

Residence Halls, now under construction.

Following the usual University policy, the buildings have been named in memory of former faculty and staff members.

Beam, Holmes, Leete and Runkle Halls are the names that have been given to the new dorms by the Board of Trustees. The dining hall has been named Warnock Hall.

The buildings were named after the following:

The late Adam Leland Beam, professor emeritus of dairy production and former assistant director of resident instruction and director of short courses in agriculture.

The late Dr. Arthur Holmes, former acting dean of the general faculty and acting dean of the College of the Liberal Arts.

The late Dr. John Hopkins Leete, former registrar, and secretary of the faculty and co-founder of Thespians.

The late Dr. Erwin William Runkle, first historian of the University and first head of the Department of Philosophy.

The late Dean Arthur Ray Warnock, first dean of men at the University.

Beam, Holmes and Leete Halls are located, from west to east, along Park Avenue; Runkle Hall, next to Agricultural Engineering Building, and Warnock Hall, along Shortlidge Road.

Henry L. Yeagley Jr., assistant director of the Department of Physical Plant, said work is proceeding on schedule on the new men's dorms in spite of a few heavy rainfalls this summer.

The buildings, scheduled for completion July 1 next year, will accommodate about 1150 men with ample recreational facilities in the area. The dining hall will have a post office and indoor recreational facilities.
