

Harrier Squad Short-manned; Candidates Summoned

By GEORGE FRENCH
Collegian Sports Writer

Like the varsity football and soccer teams, the Lion cross-country squad has been left short-manned unexpectedly.

At the latest count of noses, varsity coach Chick Werner could find only nine returnees from last year's varsity and freshman harrier squads.

A minimum of 14 candidates for the varsity was expected at the end of the summer, but five of these—all sophomores—have failed to appear for practice for a variety of reasons.

Bill Schoenebeck, Ron Landon and Ron Genovese have not yet reported to Werner. Dick Greiner transferred to Michigan, while Dick Anderson will not be eligible this semester.

Werner indicated yesterday that he would prefer a much heavier turnout of candidates. In past years, his cross-country squads have been four or five times larger than the present squad.

"A large squad provides stiff competition between its members for places on the team which will appear in the meets," Werner said. At the moment, the Lion coach does not have as many candidates as he usually has entrants in home meets.

In a call for varsity and freshman candidates, Werner emphasized that students who have had little or no previous cross-country or track experience should not be hesitant to come out for the sport as long as they have the desire to run.

Some of Penn State's most successful runners never competed in track or cross-country before coming to the University.

Curt Stone, 1946 Nittany cross-country captain, couldn't break five minutes in the mile in high school. Yet, later, he ran for the United States in the 5000 and 10,000-meter runs in the Olympic Games at London, Melbourne and Helsinki.

The three Ashenfelter brothers—Horace, Bill and Don—had never run cross-country or track before coming to Penn State.

Horace, 1948 cross-country and 1949 track captain, competed on the last two Olympic teams and won a gold medal and set a world's record in the 3000-meter steeplechase in the 1952 games. Bill also competed in the event in the 1952 Olympics.

More recent examples of successful runners who have had little or no previous experience before coming to the University are Dick Engelbrink and Bruce Austin.

Engelbrink holds the freshman records in the mile and half-mile and was a mainstay of last year's cross-country squad as a sophomore. Austin held the Penn State record in the 440-yard dash until it was broken last year by Dick Ham-bright and Jim Norton.

Candidates should report as soon as possible to Werner or Norm Gordon, freshman coach, between 4 and 5 p.m. on the golf course.

INTERNATIONAL SPORTS FLAVORING—

The sports department of The Daily Collegian is annually put in a tough spot at the beginning of a new semester on a matter of journalistic timing. While we are out of action for the three summer months, various things occur in the collegiate sports world that we don't get to you at the time it happens.

Therefore we are left in the position of forgetting most of it and just reviewing that which is either timely or important.

In the spring of 1957, we discontinued publication just as the Lion baseball team won the Eastern championship and headed for the college World Series in Omaha, Neb. They finished second in the nation to California.

We came back in September and told the tale three months later. Yet in a way, it was timely.

That brings us to this summer's developments. During the June-to-September period, four Penn State gymnasts competed in international events.

The most outstanding of course, was Armando Vega, who enrolled at the university Monday after a semester of non-competition.

We think the international treks of this Penn State athlete are worthy of our attention—at this late date.

Armando trained for the World Championships in Moscow, but that was the story we told you about yesterday. The one we will attempt to concentrate on today is the personal side of his escapades through Europe.

The muscular Olympian told us that although the Russians "tried hard to please us (the U.S. team), when we got out of there we were really relieved." Armando tried to explain the pressure of being behind the Iron Curtain, but his tenseness and loss for words were explanation enough.

On the subject of Russia, Armando said he considers the Russians to be all professionals. "Even their coaches are listed as amateurs and you know that in the United States a coach is a pro and ineligible for amateur events."

"But those Russians sure are workers. I used to think this little boy was the hardest worker there was, but not after seeing them. They work, work, work all the time. And it pays off because they're always in the best of shape and almost always win any distance event."

"And you know, they have a good cause for working so hard—themselves. The athletes are privileged characters. They wear the best clothes and drive good cars. Besides that, a good athlete is known all over the country and that's why he works so hard—he wants to hold his privileged position."

Armando also toured various other European countries where he was treated "much nicer and the people were more sociable." But he did get into another tense spot when he hit Beirut during the American landings.

He had a one-word explanation for his feelings of the Beirut experience: "Scared."

Hutchinson Rumored As Oriole Boss

ST. LOUIS (AP) — St. Louis Cardinal Manager Fred Hutchinson was reported in line yesterday to be going to Baltimore as manager.

Hutchinson, not yet relieved of his field command of the Cardinals, has acknowledged receiving four offers but has declined to pin-point them.

If Hutchinson moves to Baltimore, as predicted Tuesday by Sports Editor Bob Broeg of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, it would return Hutchinson to the American League where he formerly managed Detroit.

In Baltimore, the Orioles front office said the report of Hutchinson becoming a manager came as a surprise.

Writers covering the Baltimore club said they doubted Hutchinson would manage Baltimore. The writers pointed out that Paul Richards still has a year to go on his contract as general manager-field manager. They said Richards might be interested in Hutchinson as a coach or chief scout.

The Post-Dispatch said Richards would vacate the field manager's job and move upstairs in the front office.

Hutchinson and Richards were battery mates at Detroit in 1946 and were rival managers from 1952 through 1954 when Hutchinson had the Tigers and Richards the Chicago White Sox.

Solly Hemus, Philadelphia infielder, has been tabbed as the replacement for Hutchinson but the Cardinal's brass has been mum on the subject.

Hutchinson came under fire in St. Louis. His critics say he doesn't play enough inside baseball and leaves hard-hit pitchers in too long.

The Post-Dispatch also reported that former Cardinal Manager Eddie Stanky would return to the Red Birds in a front office capacity. Stanky now is a coach with the Cleveland Indians.

Quarterback Strongest

(Continued from page six) been impressed with him this fall. He's always been a fine passer and a fine competitor. He's a great moral booster, for even though he's on the third team, he's out there trying and working like a regular."

(Scrabis, who at 6-3, 215, is the biggest of the Lion QBs, saw only 62 minutes of action last year, but in that time completed 9 of 22 passes for 86 yards and one touchdown.)

"Hoak is a lot like Lucas although he's a better passer than Richie at this stage. But that's because he was a quarterback through high school while Richie was a halfback. He's very tough defensively, and a fiery competitor who wants to win all the time. He's not very fast but very hard to bring down."

...And what does Paterno think of his quarterback situation overall. "We've got poise, experience, leadership, passing and running ability, and everything else an outstanding quarterback should have. What more could be said?"
