

Housing Places More Students

The number of students now in temporary housing is slowly decreasing with the movement of 10 women yesterday into permanent housing and the removal of all students assigned to the Riderour Health Center.

Otto E. Mueller, director of housing, said he expects 10 more women to be assigned to permanent rooms today. By the end of the week Mueller said he hopes to have the 29 remaining women students now living in recreation rooms moved into permanent rooms.

The overcrowded situation arises annually since the University takes in more students than its capacity in order to make up for the many early drop-outs.

The Registrar's Office yesterday said it has not made a count yet of the drop-outs and the first tally would not be made until the first of next week.

Of an original load of 103 freshman women, 62 of them still remain in temporary housing facilities, Mueller said. Fifty-eight upperclasswomen remain in the study lounges.

Mueller eventually hopes to have only two students living in each study lounge. This provides the women with more room than they have in double rooms and relieves the congestion which existed last week, he said.

Students assigned to the study lounges will be moved as soon as vacancies occur, he said.

Only 25 men remain in study lounges and no freshman men remain in the recreation rooms, Mueller said. Originally 48 men were housed in study lounges and 72 were temporarily assigned to the recreation rooms.

All students that had been temporarily housed in the health center had been moved into permanent housing by the end of last week, Mueller said.

Registration For Rushing Ends Today

Registration for informal rushing will end today.

Second semester and upper-class women may register from 9 a.m. to 12 noon and 2 to 5 p.m. in Simmons lounge.

Phyllis Muskat, Panhellenic Council president, said this year's number of coeds registered is well below the spring formal rushing figure. This year's figure was not available.

Chatter dates began yesterday and will last through Friday of this week and Monday through Friday of next week.

Sororities may hold chatter dates from 2 to 5 p.m. and 6:30 to 8 p.m. All answers to chatter date invitations must be returned to the dean of women's office by 1 p.m. that day.

Preferential lists will be given to the coeds Oct. 9 and matched the next day. Bids will be slipped underneath the coeds' doors around dinnertime and ribboning will be held the same evening.

Artists Series Tickets Available at HUB Desk

Students may pick up free tickets for the New York Pro Musica concert at the Hetzel Union desk beginning at 1 p.m. today.

Student identification cards must be presented.

Tickets for non-students will go on sale at the desk tomorrow and Thursday.

The musical group, world-reknown for its work in reviving the musical masterpieces composed before the 18th century, will open the 1958-59 University Artists Series when it appears in Schwab Auditorium Friday night.

The New York Pro Musica was founded in 1952 by Noah Greenberg, who is now musical director of the group, and Bernard Krainis, one of the world's leading musicians on the recorder.

The group, which began with 5 members, now has a permanent company which includes six vocalists and four instrumentalists in addition to the director.

The group specializes in music from the Renaissance, Italian Baroque music, music from medieval Spain, Germany and France, English songs and madrigals and the church music from these periods.

It studies and performs compositions from such masters as Purcell, Lassus, Dufay, Blow, Bianchi, Perotin, Palestrina and Bird.

The New York Pro Musica is a non-profit organization. The group usually takes up to a year of practice preparing a program. In order to secure program material, it looks back into the archives of monasteries, forgotten libraries, churches and universities here and abroad and rare published manuscripts.

Every year the group presents a series of concerts at New York's Town Hall, the Cloisters, the Kaufman Auditorium, the Frick

Accident Claims Life Of Alumnus

Naval Lt. Richard P. Gramley, a 1956 graduate of the University and son of Eugene T. Gramley, president of the Penn State Alumni Association, died recently as the result of a swimming accident in Cuba.

The commanding admiral of his fleet, lying off Cuba, notified his parents this weekend.

A naval communication through Havana, Cuba today neither denied nor confirmed the death of Gramley, but said any information of this incident would have to be checked in Washington with the Pentagon.

Gramley received his commission through the NROTC program when he was graduated in 1956. He was due to finish his tour of duty this summer. He planned to enter Gettysburg Seminary as a ministerial student in the fall semester in 1959.

Survivors in addition to his parents include a sister, Mrs. Anne Freed of Danville.

The body will be flown from Cuba to Milton, where burial will take place. Complete information about the funeral is not available.

Student Encampment Backs AM Station

By PAT EVANS
Personnel Director
(Fifth of a Series)

Student encampment delegates threw their weight behind the drive for a student AM radio station when they approved this workshop recommendation:

"The University (should) apply for an AM broadcasting license to further the education and communicational contributions of radio station WDFM."

The recommendation was included in the plenary report of the workshop on communications. The report was approved at the encampment plenary session.

The recommendation will come before All-University Cabinet this fall. If it is passed by Cabinet it will be forwarded to the administration.

WDFM Station Manager Wilbur Lewellen announced last week that the student radio station may be able to convert to AM facilities for about $3000. He said the money could be drawn from a $5000 fund the station has in reserve.

Lewellen said application for an AM frequency would have to be made by the University to the Federal Communications Commission. A student group may not apply, he said.

The encampment communications workshop also recommended that campus communications media study the feasibility of summer operation with regard to economic and personnel requirements. The report included this suggestion:

"That The Daily Collegian continue publication during the summer of 1959 on a schedule determined by (the Collegian) to meet the requirements of the summer enrollment."

Another recommendation asked that the Student Handbook be sold for 25 cents starting next year.

Cabinet approved this suggestion at last week's meeting. It was included in the report from the editor and business manager of the 1958 handbook.

Lewellen was workshop chairman. Henrietta Harris was secretary.
