

Burdette 'Humiliates' Yanks in Winning 13-5 Game

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sports Writer
MILWAUKEE (AP) — Lew Burdette, the Yankee killer of 1957, did it with his bat as well as his right arm Thursday as he won his fourth straight World Series game.

The rawboned gent from the hill country of West Virginia hit a 3-run homer during a record 7-run Milwaukee spree in the first inning and the Braves made it two in a row in a 13-5 romp.

The fidgety hero of last year's Series saw his 24-inning scoreless streak snapped in a jittery first inning. But 42 minutes later when the Braves finally were retired in their first time at bat, he didn't have a care in the world. The Braves wound up with 15 hits and the Yanks had only 7.

Not since the 1921 New York Giants scored eight times in the seventh inning of a Series game had the Yanks squirmed in such misery as they did in that long first frame.

First Bob Turley, their 21-game winning ace, and then Duke Maas felt the raw power of the world champions' bats before Johnny Kucks finally ended it.

After that it was strictly a matter of going through the motions until the ninth when a dying gasp Yankee rally against a tiring pitcher netted three runs.

Burdette, the three-time winner in last year's Milwaukee triumph, was the first pitcher to win four in a row from the same club since the first series was played way back in 1903.

The Braves routed Turley before he could retire more than one man. Billy Bruton's lead-off homer on a 3-2 pitch set the pace and everybody pitched in.

Red Schoendienst bounced a double past Bauer to the right field fence.

Turley managed to blow a third strike past Eddie Mathews. That was the first and last man he was to retire. Hank Aaron worked him for a walk, watching slow breaking stuff miss the plate, and Wes Covington singled to center, driving home Schoendienst.

Out of the dugout came Manager Casey Stengel. Without delay he waved to the bullpen where Maas had been heating up.

The Duke got Frank Torre on a fly to left but walked Del Crandall on a 3-2 pitch, loading the bases. The joint was jumping when Johnny Logan singled sharply to left, knocking in both Aaron and Covington for a 4-1 lead.

Burdette, who fancies himself quite a hitter, strolled to the plate for a look at the stuff Maas was throwing. He waited for one pitch, a strike, and then swung. The ball sailed over the left field barrier at about the 355-foot mark. All of a sudden it was 7-1.

The statistics, digging deep into the record books, uncovered the news that it was the first homer by a pitcher since Bucky Walters of Cincinnati in 1940 and the fifth in all series competition.

Another search of the musty record revealed the first inning had topped the old high of six runs by the 1912 Giants against Boston. Of course, the high for any inning still is the 10 scored by the Philadelphia A's against the Chicago Cubs in 1919.

The only significant injury was to the pride of the Yankees, who were happy to escape from Milwaukee with their uniforms.

There will be an open date today for travel, although both clubs flew to New York immediately after the game. The series will be renewed Saturday at the Yankee Stadium. At this stage it is doubtful that the caravan will return to County Stadium.

Anderson, Dawkins Rated Triple Threats

Blaik Calls Halfbacks Best He Has Coached

Shackling one of the most explosive and dangerous halfback tandems in the nation looms as a major objective tomorrow when Penn State's football team meets West Point at Michie Stadium.

All-American Bob Anderson and Captain Pete Dawkins form the dazzling combination which has been called by Army's veteran Coach Blaik, "the best pair of halfbacks in my 17 years at the Point."

There is probably nothing about this versatile pair that can be written that hasn't been written before. According to reports from the Point, they can do just about everything with a football.

Anderson is the more widely-known of the duo, mainly because of his All-American selection last year in his first varsity season—a rarity for any collegian. Blaik has even compared the 6-2, 205-pound speed demon to the immortal Glenn Davis, one of the Academy's all-time greats.

"He's Army's finest sophomore since Glenn Davis," the West Point deacon remarked last year. "In style, you might call him a cross between Davis and Doc Blanchard (the other member of the famed Mr. Inside—Mr. Outside Army wartime powerhouse

It's no wonder Anderson is being compared with Davis. Last year he smashed Davis' school rushing record with 983 yards for a 6.42 average per trip. That was good enough for third place among the nation's ground-gaining leaders.

But Anderson went even further in the touchdown parade, wracking up 14, two less than the country's leader, Leon Burton of Arizona State.

Anderson's biggest assets are his speed and maneuverability. He can do the 100 in 10 flat and has left many ambitious defensive men lying on their fanny in the wake of a swivel-hipped touchdown gallop. And what makes him even more dangerous is his ability of going through the middle of the line just as easy as going around it. (He proved that against Penn State last year.)

Dawkins is also a speed merchant who can match Anderson when it comes to broken field running. Last year he ranked 6th in the nation in touchdowns with 11. Two of those TDs were scored in Army's 27-13 win over the Lions.

In Army's opener against South

Carolina Saturday, Dawkins gave the Anderson-Dawkins combine indications of shooting for the TD leadership this year by scoring four times in a 45-8 win.

Dawkins' rushing record in 1957 wasn't bad either. His 665 yards in 124 carries for a 5.36 average earned him the 18th place in the country.

The Penn State scouting party which watched Army's rout of Carolina Saturday was quite impressed with the performances of

"They do everything well," backfield Coach Frank Patrick said, "but if we play the type of game we are capable of, we'll stop them."

Navy Harriers Boast Senior-Loaded Team

By GEORGE FRENCH
1950 Lion track Captain Jim Gehrdes will bring his senior-loaded Navy cross-country squad to University Park Saturday with the hopes of avenging last year's 22-23 loss to the Nittany harriers.

Captain Dick Winter, Frank Young, Brad Smith, Leslie Palmer and Tom Monaghan are all back for their third varsity season. Last fall, Winter was sick and did not run.

Smith placed third behind present Lion seniors Fred Kerr and Ed Moran. Monaghan finished sixth behind the Nittanians' Dick Engelbrink—now a junior—and Clem Schoenebeck—a junior last year, but presently enrolled in Tufts' Dental School.

Other returning varsity Middies are Bob Kunkle (7th), Palmer (8th), Young (9th), Ken McLeod (16th), and Chico Chavez (20th).

Up from last year's Plebe team which lost 22-37 to the Lion cubs are Bill Kiggins and Bernard Fleming. Kiggins—a Greensburg product—won the 2.7-mile test over the Naval Academy course last fall. Fleming placed ninth.

Denny Johnson (2nd) and Herm Weber (4th) are the only returning Lions from the frosh squad.

Two years ago, Moran, Kerr and Schoenebeck finished in a 3-way tie for first place, giving the Lions a 25-30 edge.

Last year's meet was over Navy's 4-mile course. Saturday's varsity meet will be over a 5-mile distance. Collegiate cross-country meets are over distances of from three to seven miles.

Freshman Coach Norm Gordon's yearlings will open the season this afternoon in a dual meet with the Plebes at Annapolis, Md. The meet was originally scheduled for Saturday.

Scheduled to run for the freshmen are Steve Moorhead, Mike Miller, Fred Larson, Dave LaHoff, Fred Thorwart, Jim Joule, George Machlan, Larry Millhouse, Bill Stout, Grayson Moore, Herb Garver and Denny Dinsmore.

If you'll bring your car in early for winterizing we can check radiator and heater hose connections. This will prevent expensive loss of antifreeze during the winter. NO EXTRA CHARGE. —OF COURSE.

Soccer Record Tops

In five seasons as Penn State soccer coach, Ken Hosterman has compiled a record of 38 victories, 5 losses and 2 ties. The Nittany Lions gained national honors in 1954 and 1955.
