Dawkins, Anderson Carry Army Hopes

WEST POINT, Oct. 4 — A revenge-minded Penn State football team will be trying to stump the nation's grid experts this afternoon when it battles sixth-ranked Army before an expected capacity crowd of 28,000 here at Michie Stadium.

Kickoff time is 1:30. Radio Station WMAJ will broadcast starting at 1:25.

Coach Rip Engle's unpredictable Lions go into the tilt as a two-touchdown underdog, but many of the local Cadet partisans feel the "victory" margin will be much higher—and they're backing up their claims with some of that green stuff.

Although the Nittanians first met the Cadets back in 1899, this is only the ninth game in the series. However, the Lions haven't won since that first scuffle when ex-Pennsylvania legislator Earl Hewitt returned a punt 65 yards for a touchdown and a 6-0 conquest. Since then the Penn State gang has lost five and tied two.

Three of the defeats have come in the last four years and can be remembered quite vividly by the current Nittany contingent. In 1955, when the series was renewed after a 4-year lapse, Army bombed the Lions 35-6. Two years ago, the Nittanians outplayed the Cadets for three quarters but lost 14-7 because of high-gear first quarter attack by the winners.

Last fall, the Blue and White carried a 13-7 lead into the intermission, but were crushed by a relentless second half offensive, finally losing 27-13.

If the Lions expect to end the 'jinx' this afternoon they will have put a halter on Army's flashy touchdown twins—All-American Bob Anderson and Captain Pete Dawkins. Anderson and Dawkins were the heroes in the Cadet's surprising easy 45-8 win over South Carolina last week with Anderson passing for two touchdowns and Dawkins scoring four.

But that dazzling halfback tandem isn't the only problem Penn State will have to solve. There's also that new streamlined alignment unveiled by the Cadets in the Carolina tussle—the "bazooka" or "lonesome end" formation.

This formation features an unbalanced line in front of a wing-T or straight-T lineup with one end stationed 15-18 yards away from his teammates on the forward wall. With this lineup, the Cadets offer a more wide-open attack than previous years when their main trait was sheer power.

On a rain-soaked turf against South Carolina, the Black Knights gained 184 yards through the air and 344 via of the ground route. With Anderson and junior quarterback Joe Caldwell doing most of the passing, Army com-

Faubus Vows to Uphold Ban on Mixed Classes

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Gov. Orval E. Faubus of Arkansas hurled new defiance at the U.S. Supreme Court yesterday declaring he would never open public schools for racially mixed classes.

A private corporation proceeded with plans to set up segregated schools for white high school pupils idled by Faubus' order closing four schools.

But a plan for private instruction of 10,000 high school students in Norfolk, Va., fell through because the planning group failed to obtain services of a single public school teacher.

Faubus, in referring to the corporation plan, said "The only question is whether the facilities

Procedure Confuses 'Who's Who' Status

The question of reinstating "Who's Who in American Colleges" at the University is "up in the air" after hitting a parliamentary snag last night.

The motion to reinstate the publication, passed by a 13-10 vote of All-University Cabinet Thursday night, was questioned last night by Edward Frymoyer, president of the Association of Independent Men, on legality.

The motion was carried by Cabinet on a second vote after All-University President Jay Feldstein refused to break a previous tie. Feldstein left the motion on the floor for further discussion, although the discussion had not been called for by a Cabinet member.

Daniel Thalimer, Cabinet parliamentarian, said last night after hearing of the appeal that the second vote would stand.

"The underlying principle of parliamentary law is to accomplish the will of the group," Thalimer said. Since the will of the group was expressed in the second vote, he said, he would rule that the decision to reinstate the publication would stand.

Frank J. Simes, dean of men, had expressed dissatisfaction with Cabinet's decision because, he said, the publication "has been on the black list of deans all over the country because it is a money-raising venture."

Simes also was dissatisfied with being chosen to serve on the special committee which was set up to determine candidates for the publication.

Dean Weston Expected Back By Next Week

Dean of Women Pearl O. Weston is expected to return to her duties sometime next week after a two-week leave of absence, according to R. Mae Shultz, acting dean.

Miss Weston is reported recuperating at her home in Carnegie after being released from Mercy Hospital in Pittsburgh where she had undergone a series of tests and diagnostic work.

She was admitted to the hospital Sept. 18 on the advice of her physician after she had not been feeling well for some time.

There has been no report on the nature of the tests and diagnosis and their results so far.

Mrs. Shultz, assistant dean of women, has assumed the dean of women duties in Miss Weston's absence.

can be used by the corporation, or not used at all."

He added that he will "support and assist the corporation."

A temporary court injunction prevented use of Little Rock high school buildings by a private corporation. The private group continued efforts to collect money and locate buildings for segregated schools.

A hearing on whether the temporary injunction should be made permanent will be held in St. Louis Monday by the 8th Circuit Court of Appeals.

It appeared unlikely the circuit court would sanction use of Little Rock high schools by a private group in the face of Monday's Supreme Court opinion. The high court held evasive schemes for maintaining segregation could not be countenanced.

Faubus charged federal courts with "simply playing for a bloc of votes in the Northern states." He predicted plans for private schools in Little Rock would succeed, declaring federal courts have no authority to say how state money is being spent.

New court tests of Virginia's anti-integration laws are slated next week. Attorneys for the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People will plead for reopening of public schools in Norfolk and Warren County.

Euwema Will Give Talk At Faculty Luncheon

Ben Euwema, dean of the College of the Liberal Arts, will speak at the Faculty Luncheon Club, at 12 noon Monday in dining room "A", Hetzel Union Building.

His topic is "The Care and Feeding of Deans."

LA Lectures to Begin

Dr. Herbert Heaton, visiting professor of history, will speak on "Other Wests Than Ours" in the first of the Liberal Arts Lecture Series at 8 p.m. tomorrow in 121 Sparks.

Date Night Parking Will Be Studied

All-University President Jay Feldstein and Dean of Men Frank J. Simes will conduct a parking survey next week to study possible short-time parking around McElwain and Simmons Residence Halls.

Under new regulations this semester, parking is banned at all times on Shortlidge Road between College Avenue and Pollock Road.

Feldstein told All-University Cabinet Thursday night that he and Simes will study some sort of plan to allow parking long enough to pick up a date.

Feldstein also reported to Cabinet on progress of the Lecture Series committee. He said no word has been received yet on the invitation sent to former President Harry S. Truman.

Christian K. Arnold, staff assistant to President Eric A. Walker, telephoned New York City yesterday concerning the possibility of obtaining Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt as a speaker. Nothing definite was set up.

Victim of Fall Is 'Comfortable'

William Cramer, a construction worker injured in a fall at the Petroleum Refining Laboratory site Thursday, was in "fairly comfortable condition" yesterday, a Centre County Hospital official said.

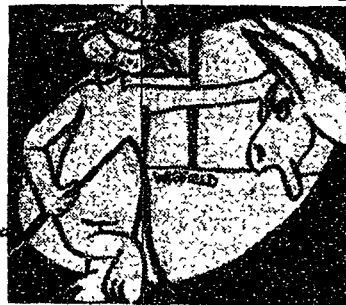

Cramer was injured when he lost his footing on the steel girder framework of the building and fell 18 feet, suffering a broken leg.

The building is going up on the land just south of the Forestry Building.

Cramer, who was operated on in the hospital Thursday night, had suffered a compound fracture above the ankle.

A Philadelphia resident, Cramer is employed by Tyrite Inc., a New Jersey firm which is doing work for the University.

Cool Weather Expected Today

The Nittany Lion, fully equipped to take on Army's vaunted mule, called for good football weather—at least in State College.

The Lion says the forecast for today is cloudy skies and continued cool temperatures.

Altoona Building to Be Dedicated

A $550,000 academic building will be dedicated at the Altoona Campus tomorrow.

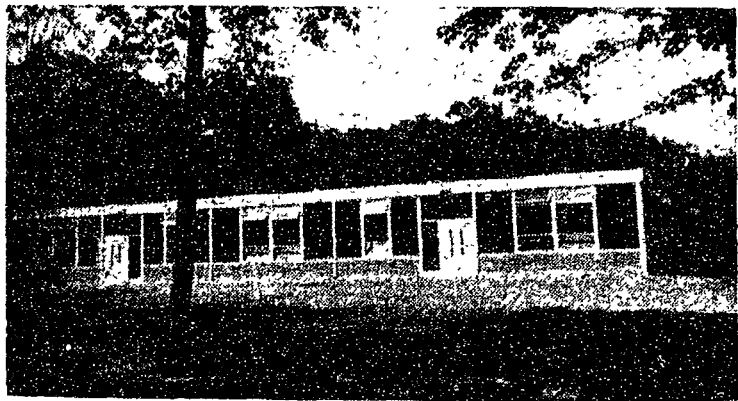

The building, financed almost entirely by Altoona residents, is located on the site of the former Ivyside Amusement Park.

President Eric A. Walker will speak at the 3 p.m. dedication ceremonies. Edward L. Keller, director of general extension, will also attend.

The new building is composed of classrooms, laboratories, library, art room and art gallery, faculty and administration offices and a small auditorium.

One of the uses for the auditorium will be to view television classes transmitted from the Uni-
