

Euwema Calls Dean 'Non-Teaching Prof'

By JANET DURSTINE

A dean, according to Dr. Ben Euwema, dean of the College of the Liberal Arts, is only a professor who has stopped teaching—temporarily, he hopes.

Euwema, speaking at the Liberal Arts Faculty Club luncheon yesterday, said a dean's main job is picking the right person for the right job and then making the job possible for him.

The higher a person rises in the academic hierarchy, the more he loses touch with reality, Euwema said. The dean, he said, is almost completely divorced from reality; he spends the day in committee meetings and conferences.

The dean, according to Euwema, is often blamed for things he doesn't do. "He opens the College with trembling hands reads the Bookworm (a Centre Daily Times column) concerning the University with mounting apprehension," he said.

Euwema described the job of dean as varying with the individual in office. Some deans, he said, spend all their time in research; others keep track of all the minute details of the college's operation.

The dean, according to Euwema, performs ceremonial duties at commencement, welcomes visiting societies, hands out awards to students; he doesn't know chosen by a committee of which he is not a member and serves as an ex-officio member of committees and the University Senate.

He gave the following suggestion to faculty members for getting along with a dean:

- Don't talk down to him and don't explain technical terms in 1-syllable Anglo-Saxon words. He was once a faculty member, too.
- Don't look for obscure, complicated motives in the things he does. Complicated deans don't last long.
- Don't accept hearsay evidence about the dean's thoughts or actions.
- Don't assume he is solely preoccupied with one faculty member or one department.
- Anyone who brings a problem to a dean should suggest a solution.

Panel Will Discuss Far East Tonight

The International Affairs Commission and Club will present a panel discussion on "The Far East—Why Get Involved?" at 7 tonight in the Chapel lounge.

The panel will consist of Dr. Robert T. Oliver, head of the Department of Speech; Dr. Rustum Y. Rev, assistant professor of art; Dr. Mark D. Shaw, instructor in agricultural engineering; and Dr. Harry D. Harootian, instructor in history.

Moderator will be the Rev. Hal Leiper, assistant University chaplain.

All interested students have been invited to attend.

Boyle to Discuss Golf At WRA Meeting Today

The Women's Recreation Association Golf Club will meet at 4:10 p.m. today in 240 Recreation Hall.

Joe Boyle, coach of the men's golf team, will discuss golf etiquette and buying a set of clubs.

Women who have completed the 9-hole qualifying round for the ladder tournament have been asked to bring their score cards.

The meeting is open to all interested women students.

Approximately 1200 research projects are being carried on by the University.

Kiwanis Sponsors Charity Train Ride

The second annual Autumn Glory Train Ride, sponsored by the Altoona Kiwanis Club for its underprivileged boys' health camp, will leave the Altoona Pennsylvania Railroad station at 1 p.m. Sunday.

Tickets for the train ride are on sale at the railroad station in Altoona.

This year's route, covering 85 miles, will include Alexandria, Water Street, Williamsburg, Ganister, Frankstown, Hollidaysburg and the Horseshoe Curve. Refreshments will be served during the 4-hour trip.

JBR Applications Due

Applications for the Association of Independent Men Judicial Board of Review are available at the Hetzel Union desk.

Applications must be turned in at the HUB desk by 5 p.m. Friday.

Profs Discuss Education Ideas On TV Show

"Penn State—Its Men and Ideas," one of the new University-sponsored television shows, deals with the problem of the right and wrong in education today.

Telecast over WFBG-TV in Altoona, the program is "designed to present people teaching at the University in terms of their ideas about education," according to Gilbert E. Aberg, moderator of the show.

Program time is 9:50 to 10 a.m. every Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

Aberg said two faculty members discuss the subject of the week, one on Monday and the other on Wednesday. On Friday both are brought together to jointly present their views.

Friday's show is not a debate, but "a demonstration of approaching the same subject from two different points of view," he said.

This week's topic is writing. It is the second of a 3-week series concerning the "three R's"—reading, writing and arithmetic.

Participants are Dr. E. Terry Schwarz, assistant professor of education, and Dr. Edward J. Nichols, professor of English.

Two of the topics to be dealt with this semester are the use of audio-visual aids and the question of how much liberal arts education scientists should have. The program is produced through the Department of Public Information in conjunction with WFBG-TV.

Uruguayan Studies Pasture Research

An agronomist from Uruguay visited the campus and other parts of the United States this summer to learn American methods of pasture management.

He is Octavio Perez Monichon, chief of the government agronomy service in San Jose, who came to this country under the sponsorship of the International Cooperation Administration.

His training program included work in various laboratories and tours of many sections of the country. He spent some time with Dr. Howard L. Carnahan of the Pasture Research Laboratory and also visited farms in this area.

There are 54 chapters of national honorary and professional societies on campus.

Hort Club Features 'Back Yard' Displays

The Penn State Horticulture Club will present a look at "Your Back Yard, 1959" Saturday and Sunday, when it holds its 45th Annual Horticulture Show.

This year's show, which will be held in the Livestock Pavilion, will be dedicated to Dr. Liberty H. Bailey, the father of American horticulture. It marks the 100th anniversary of his birth.

Dr. Bailey, who was born in South Haven, Mich., founded the Department of Horticulture at Michigan Agricultural College, now Michigan State University. Later he moved to Cornell University as professor of horticulture. He was also the first president of the American Society for Horticulture Science, founded in 1903.

The show, which will be open from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. on Saturday and from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. on Sunday, is expected to draw thousands of visitors from the students, faculty, alumni and other campus visitors. Last year 12,000 persons visited the show.

This year's show will feature a colorful display of chrysanthemums and annuals. The sculptured pieces and the setting will follow a modernistic design. Delano Muse, senior in horticulture, is chairman of the show.

Students in horticulture design and produce the show each year with the cooperation of other students and faculty members of the College of Agriculture.

A booklet describing the show plan and containing staff-written articles will be distributed at the show. Advisors to the club are Dr. Darrell E. Walker, assistant professor of plant breeding, and Dr. Loren D. Tukey, associate professor of pomology.

There will be no charge for admission.

Euwema To Speak

Dr. Ben Euwema, dean of the College of the Liberal Arts, will be guest speaker at the Belle Lettres Club meeting at 7:30 tonight in Simmons lounge.

Managers Named For 'Druid Circle'

Linda Wilson, stage manager for the Players' production of the late John van Druten's "The Druid Circle" has named crew managers.

They are: Carol Dominick, advertising; Lillian Davenport, construction; Connie Coates and Dambly Lobingier, costumes; Charles Dickinson, house; Harry Jones and Charles Antalosky, make-up; Barbara Breen, properties; Ned Thomas, lights, and Dean Eayre and Robert Kelley, lighting.

"The Druid Circle" will open Friday at Center Stage in the Extension Conference Center and will run Friday and Saturday nights until Nov. 8.

State College Police Nab 25 Motor Violators

State College Police made 25 arrests over the weekend for motor vehicle violations.

Police arrested nine people for speeding and traveling too fast for conditions. Other arrests were for improper passing and driving with noisy mufflers.
