

Cabinet Budget $22,900 For Student Government

All-University Cabinet has budgeted $22,900 for the operation of student government this year. Managed through the Interclass Budget System, funds are received from student fees, junior and senior class big weekend dances and the student handbook. The senior class takes the biggest bite from the budget. It is allotted $7825 for its activities which include Senior Ball, class day, caps, gowns, announcements and invitations, permanent reunion fund and "miscellaneous."

Phineus Gets Consequences In Musical

By JEANETTE SAXE

Phineus T. will pay the consequences of losing a TV quiz show question in "Entertainment U.S.A.", Thespians' production of an original musical comedy review which opens at 8 p.m. tomorrow in Schwab Auditorium.

The show will run tomorrow, Friday and Saturday.

Phineus becomes a contestant on "Your Ignorance is Our Bliss" (a take-off on Truth or Consequences) and loses. As his penalty, he must, among other things, get a balloon from a balloon dancer, Choo Choo la Bump.

The theme of "Entertainment U.S.A." came from discussions held last spring by students and faculty members interested in show business.

James Jimirro, now attending graduate school at Syracuse University, Stuart Kahan, serving in the Marine Corps at Parris Island, S.C., and Ray T. Fortunato, director of employee relations, wrote the dialogue. Theodore Pauloski, who plays Phineus, rewrote parts of his role.

Stanley Epstein, senior in music education from West Chester, and Fortunato wrote the music.

Thespians features a musical group in each of its fall shows. "Entertainment U.S.A." features the Phi Mu Alpha band directed by James Hessler, senior in music education from Lebanon.

The show is under direction of Fortunato. Richard Watson is show coordinator; Sylvia Guyer, choral director; Mary Lou Rowe and Sylvia Guyer, dance directors; Jon Barry Wilder, Robert Piccone, Bryna Nelson and Pauloski, dialogue directors; Kenneth Todd, musical director; Frank Morris, orchestrations; and Daniel Robertson, set designs and technical director.

Players to Present 'Druid Circle' Friday

The entangled lives of students and faculty members of a small university in England will be portrayed when Players gives its first performance of the late John van Druten's "The Druid Circle" at 8 p.m. Friday at Center Stage in the Extension Conference Center.

The show will run Friday and Saturday nights until its closing performance on Nov. 8. It will be directed by Kelly Yeaton, associate professor of theatre arts.

The basic story of "The Druid Circle" is one of conflict between youth and age. It depicts the decay that occurs in any circle where living becomes a routine.

The conflict concerns Professor White, who has no patience with love, and two couples, Tom Lloyd-Ellis and his girl Megan Lewis and Tom and Brenda Maddox. Lloyd-Ellis and Megan are students and Maddox is a professor of history at the university.

Van Druten, late English dramatist and novelist, used love, youth and university life as the basis for many of his plays. The basic elements in "The Druid Circle" are very much like those in van Druten's first play, "Young Woodly," which deals with a poetic youth who falls in love with his headmaster's wife. "Young Woodly" was at first banned in England but was successfully produced in New York.

Van Druten is one of the few dramatists who have successfully produced a 3-act play using only three characters. He did this in "Voice of the Turtle."

Van Druten wrote 23 other plays, including "I Remember Mama," "I Am a Camera" and "Leave Her to Heaven," and four fiction and three non-fiction books.
