FIVE CENTS

Experts To Rate English Department

An objective appraisal of the curriculums and organization of the Department of English will be conducted by two outside administrative experts tomorrow, Thursday and Friday.

The appraisal is being made at the suggestion of President Eric A. Walker.

The visitors will report directly to Walker any recommendations they feel will improve the department's present workings and future development, according to Ben Euwema, dean of the College of the Liberal Arts.

Dr. Russell B. Nye, head of the English department at Michigan State University since 1956, and Dr. James F. Fullington, who has been both head of the English department and dean of the College of Arts and Sciences at Ohio State University, are the consultants.

The evaluation's overall aim is described as seeing if the department is operating as efficiently as possible. Nye and Fullington will meet with the department's 8-member advisory committee and talk to individual professors, who have been encouraged by Euwema to discuss freely any suggestions they may have to improve the department.

Two years ago a committee of the Middle States Association Evaluation and Credit Institution appraised the University and suggested that the departments of English composition and literature be merged, Euwema said.

Few universities, he said, have separate departments. A committee of two men from each department and one member from the Department of History was set up to plan the merging.

According to several faculty members, some "unhappiness" resulted from this merging when people who had always taught literature, for instance, were asked to teach courses in composition.

Joining the two departments naturally "did not meet with the unanimous approval of everybody," Euwema said. "Some people think there has been an enormous amount of tension, but I think it has been exaggerated." Nobody is ever forced to teach a course, he said.

The evaluation will attempt to

New Property To Be Bought By University

The University is planning to buy a 7-acre tract of land northwest of campus and buildings on it, to be used as headquarters and garage for its more than 200 motor vehicles.

The land is located between North Atherton and North Allen Streets and Mitchell Avenue. The buildings on the property now house the Clemson Motor Company.

The Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees voted in a weekend meeting to lift its 60-day option on the land and to buy it "as soon as possible."

The buildings include a main garage, the Butler Building behind the garage, a two-story service station, a body shop and boiler room.

The University plans to shift its Office Services Division and garage operations to the new area. They are now in the Service Building on campus. The 56-car station wagon fleet is housed at Beaver Field.

"I JUST FELT SOMETHING GO," said the driver of the truck which sank into soft ground at the Hammond Engineering site and toppled over yesterday afternoon. The bulldozer, riding on the truck, just fell out onto the ground. No one was hurt.

Ugly Man Parade To Be Held Tonight

The ninth annual Ugly Man parade sponsored by Alpha Phi Omega, men's national service fraternity, will be held at 6 tonight.

Seventeen independent units and 11 fraternity groups have entered the contest, the first phase of which is the parade.

The parade will form at the corner of Shortlidge and Pollock Roads. It will proceed down Shortlidge to College Avenue, where it will pick up a police escort, and then will go to Burrowes Road. The parade will then continue up Pollock Road to its starting place, where it will disband.

At the end of the parade, each unit will be responsible for its own material and equipment and must take it with them when they leave the area.

The parade will be judged by officials stationed all along the parade route. It is up to the individual units to so advertise themselves so as to make themselves known to the judges. A first through fifth place will be awarded to both the independents and fraternities.

The penny voting will be held on the Mall today through Thursday. The individual com-

Algerian Stage Set For Free Election

PARIS (AP) — Premier De Gaulle yesterday ordered the French Army to withdraw immediately from political activity in Algeria to clear the way for free elections there Nov. 23.

It was De Gaulle's sternest crackdown on the officers who formed so-called Committees of Public Safety after the politico-military revolt of May 13 in Algiers. The committees raised the cry for De Gaulle's return to power and led the way for him to take the premiership.

Now De Gaulle sternly wrote to the French commander for Algeria, Gen. Raoul Salan:

"The moment has come . . . For the military to stop taking part in any organization which has a political character, whatever may be the reasons which, under the exceptional circumstances which swept Algeria since the month of May, motivated their participation. Nothing will henceforth justify their belonging to such formations. I order them to withdraw without delay."

De Gaulle told Salan further that he insisted on having a free election for all persons living in Algeria, whatever their views might be.

There was no indication from Paris what effect De Gaulle's move would have on the movement now underway with headquarters in Cairo to "free" the Algerian government.

The Provisional Algerian Government was formed recently in Cairo and its information office in New Delhi, India, has been making a steady plea to Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to recognize and aid an independent Algeria.

Nehru yesterday refused formal recognition to the provisional government but pledged moral support.

He said: "The real test in our mind has been how we can help in this matter and not merely make a gesture without helping."

Diem Named To Replace MacKenzie

Albert E. Diem, vice president in charge of manufacturing for Dictaphone Corp., Bridgeport, Conn., was named vice president for business administration yesterday.

Diem replaces Ossian R. MacKenzie who resigned to devote full time to the duties of the post of dean of the College of Business Administration.

As vice president, Diem will have general supervision over the physical planning of construction and the operational activities of the University, including housing, personnel, employee relations, food service, security, purchasing and physical plant.

Diem

Diem, a University alumnus, has been vice president for the Dictaphone Corp. since 1952. He joined the firm in 1937 and was appointed assistant controller in 1938.

He was promoted to manager of purchases in 1942 and manager of manufacturing in 1946 before becoming vice president in charge of manufacturing.

Diem has been serving on the Alumni Fund Council and also as a director of the University Christian Association.

He is married to the former Aelaide B. Wolf of Indiana. They have a son, John, 20, and a daughter, Elizabeth Jane, 15.

Lions Thump Marquette

ALL ALONE—The Lions' Bruce Gilmore (40) slants off tackle for 10 yards and the first Penn State touchdown in the first quarter. In the final quarter, Gilmore bucked over from the one for the Nittanies final TD after personally accounting for 78 yards on the last touchdown drive.

There must have been a Southern breeze blowing in the Nittany Valley Saturday afternoon.

Why else would Penn State's football team perform like one of those defensive-minded clubs from down yonder in its Homecoming tussle with Marquette?

The Lions easily blasted the oft-beaten Warriors, 40-8, but even the score doesn't indicate all of the defensive prowess displayed by Coach Rip Engle's Blue and White rebels.

Marquette was limited to 62 net yards by the hard-charging Lion defenders—23 of the total coming on the ground.

Engle's gang was so tough during the first half that they pushed the visitors to a minus 22 yards running total, although "giving up" 13 yards through the air.

But it was the alertness of the Lions—particularly in sophomore halfback Jim Kerr—which accounted for the wild
