University Research

Research Fund Sources Are Varied

By LIANNE CORDERO Third of a Series Most of the contributions to the University's $8 million research budget come from three important sources—the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, federal agencies and industry.

Other contributors to research include private foundations, alumni, professional societies, other organized groups and individuals. But available funds are not sufficient to meet the needs of the faculty and graduate student body, according to the University Senate Committee on Research Policy and the Administrative Committee on Research.

Each year part of the approved University budget from the Commonwealth is allocated to the deans to support research activities in their respective colleges. These funds are used for partial support of faculty salaries for supplies and materials, for equipment, for stipends of graduates assigned to research and for other proposes, such as travel and communications.

The Central Fund for Research was established by the Board of Trustees to provide grants to individual faculty members who lack sufficient research support. The grants vary between $50 and $300, but may increase as circumstances warrant.

The Central Fund for Research is supported by money derived partly from the state-allotted budget and partly from proceeds from licensing of inventions owned by the University.

Two of the programs of the Graduate School aid research. Graduate School fellowships, carrying a stipend of $2000 for the academic year, are available to outstanding advanced graduate students in any field. The recipient must carry a full schedule of academic work, part of which is usually research on his own thesis.

Several hundred graduate assistantships are assigned each year to students who show promise of superior ability to carry on graduate study. These appointees may serve as assistants in research, a number of whom are supported from funds made available to the deans of their colleges through their annual budgets from the University general fund.

University funds provide only a small portion of the total cost of the research program. Faculty members are encouraged to seek financial support for their research activities either from government agencies or from other sources.

Appreciable research support has been given by the Atomic Energy Commission, the Office of Naval Research, the Office of Ordnance Research, the National Science Foundation, the National Institutes and other agencies.

Federal funds also are received as a result of specific federal legislation, such as the Hatch Act of 1887 establishing Agricultural Experiment Stations and the amended Hatch Act of 1955.

In order for the University to be eligible for some of these funds, the Commonwealth must supply a matching amount.

Research funds, whether given by federal agencies, industrial sponsors or other sources, usually come within the following four categories: research projects, research grants, research fellowships and grants-in-aid.

Senate Rules Privilege Loss For APhiDelta

The 4-week removal of social privileges of Alpha Phi Delta fraternity has been accepted by the Senate subcommittee on group discipline of the Senate Committee on Student Affairs.

The recommendation for the removal of social privileges was made by the Interfraternity Council Board of Control.

The subcommittee will permit the fraternity to entertain alumni and their wives or dates in the fraternity Oct. 25 and Nov. 1, Dean O. Edward Pollock said.

The Board of Control recommended last Thursday night the removal of the group's social privileges for four weeks, effective Oct. 13. The board further recommended the fraternity be placed on social probation for four weeks beginning Nov. 8 during which time it will be subject to close scrutiny by the Board of Control.

Alpha Phi Delta was found guilty of a clear violation of the University social regulations concerning the entertainment on Oct. 4 of women guests with inadequate chaperonage, Ronald Siders, board chairman, said.

Siders said the fraternity members made no effort to secure other chaperones or cancel the social function when they had only one chaperone in attendance

On February 16, 1859, 69 young men reported for Penn State's first term.

Robert Johnson, co-chairman of the contest, said yesterday.

Entrants who didn't place in the parade are rapidly bettering their chances in the contest according to the results of the penny voting, Johnson said.

The penny jars for the ten finalists from the parade will be placed in the Hetzel Union ballroom on Friday before the skits, which will begin at 7:30 p.m.

John Hoffman, Phi Kappa Sigma, and Paul Craska, Nittany 43, took first place in their division for the parade. There were five winners each from the fraternity and independent divisions. Seventeen independent units and 11 fraternity groups have entered the contest.

The penny voting on the mall will not only help the candidates to win but will support the expansion of the HUB facilities. Some of the suggested improvements include: better record players in the music listening booths, purchase of more records and improvement or expansion of other existing facilities.

A list of the total number of points accumulated by each of the contestants up to that time will be published in The Daily Collegian on Friday. The final winners will be announced after the skits on Friday night.

Players to Present Comedy by Shaw

By JEANETTE SAXE

Politics, polite burglary, art, artificiality, microbes and eternity all provide food and farcical comedy and luminous conversation in the Players' production of George Bernard Shaw's "Too True To Be Good."

The play will run Oct. 23, 24 and 25 in Schwab Auditorium.

The plot involves, among other things, the virtues of lying and artifices of love, the foolishness of mothers and the inconsistencies of religion, the joys of army life and the sorrows of being rich.

The settings for the play range from the sick room of a wealthy invalid to an outpost on a tropical island where a mere handful of men keep a watchful eye on hostile tribesmen.

The characters include Aubrey Baggot, preacher turned war ace turned burglar turned gentleman; Miss Moppley, who is dying of the measles but becomes a female superman; her mother who is not a worrier but is afraid that the "brigands" will cut off her daughter's ears and disfigure her for life.

Sweetie, an ex-chamber maid who has got into the habit of changing her love life every day; Private Meek, the saddest sack who ever fought off hostile natives; Colonel Tallboys, who has an eye for the ladies, a distaste for Private Meek and a hobby of sketching in water colors; and a doctor, an elderly atheist and a monster.

Warren Smith, associate professor of theatre arts, will direct the play. He has devised a method of staging the show, which is a combination of a regularly staged production and a drama quartet.

"Ah-h-h-h! At last I've arrived at the source of that marvelous aroma!"

What puts us all in a good mood? The aroma and taste of well-cooked food
